GOOD NEWS FROM CAPITAL

Administration Leaders Wire That Outlook Is Brightening — He Praises Ashurst's Stand.

Special to The New York Times.

PUEBLO, Col., Sept. 25.—The issue over the ratification of the Peace Treaty with the League covenant was clearly defined today by President Wilson in an open challenge to the opposition in the Senate, using words which were possible of but one interpretation.

The President stated first in Denver and later at Pueblo that he would declare the Peace Treaty rejected if the Senate adopted, in its present form, the proposed reservation of the majority of the Foreign Relations Committee to Article X. of the League covenant.

Advices received by the Presidential party late today in regard to the situation in Washington were accepted as representing conditions as more favorable for ratification of the Peace Treaty and League covenant without textual changes or reservations that would involve resubmission than at almost any time since Mr. Wilson's tour began.

It is understood that the opposition among Democratic Senators has weakened and that not more than two Democrats, or three at most, are opposed to ratification virtually as the President asks. Of chief importance among the advices was a teegram to Mr. Wilson from Senator Ashurst of Arizona, announcing his purpose to stand by the treaty.

The President sent this reply to the Senator:

The Hon. Henry F. Ashurst, United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

May I not express my admiration of your statesmanlike attitude toward the treaty and the sense of gratitude with which I have read your message?

WOODROW WILSON.

In addition to the telegram from Ashurst messages were received by the President today from Senators Robinson of Arkansas and Simmons and Overman of North Carolina. They subscribed to the Ashurst telegram and spoke favorably of the general outlook for speedy ratification. Advices were also received that the addresses by President Wilson in the last few days had had a decided effect. The Administration leaders say that they are confident that the amendments proposed by Johnson and Fall will be defeated, and that it will be possible to prevent the adoption of the proposed reservation to Article X. and other proposals that would mean resubmission of the treaty.

The President gave evidence by voice and manner in both speeches in Colorado today that he was in fighting mood and was prepared for a showdown with the opposition Senators before the people of the country. He asserted that his was the right to decide, as Chief Executive, whether the Senate committee reservation represented rejection or ratification, and that he would not hesitate to act.

The President said that he had no doubt as to the attitude of the people, since on the tour now nearing completion he had received more inspiring knowledge concerning public opinion than on any previous trip. In serving notice on the Senate opposition he exclaimed:

"We go in on equal terms or we don't go in at all."

In a vigorous attack on hyphenated Americans, who, the President charged, were organized in opposition to the treaty, he asserted that when he found any one with a hyphen in this country he knew that he had found an enemy of the Republic.

In discussing the question of the six votes given to England and her colonies President Wilson said that any one who stated that the United States was put at a disadvantage was either deliberately saying what was untrue or had not read the covenant.

"And I will let him decide as to that," he added.

Presented as Modern Paul.

President Wilson was presented to the crowd here by ex-Governor Alva Adams as the "twentieth century Paul," who would shatter the opposition to the treaty in the Senate. The address was delivered in the new City Hall, which was crowded to capacity. The former Governor asked anxiously at the outset if "all you people back yonder can hear."

There are 6,000 steel workers on strike in Pueblo, but the situation is

Ashurst Comes Out for Treaty; Tells Wilson Doubts Are Gone

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—Senator Ashurst, Democrat, of Arizona, who, up to a few days ago, had been counted upon by Republican leaders as a probable supporter of reservations and perhaps of the Johnson amendment to the Peace Treaty, today sent a telegram to President Wilson at Pueblo, Col., stating that he would vote against all reservations and amendments.

Mr. Ashurst received a telegram from the President some days ago on his reported attitude for reservations and replied at that time that he was still considering the matter.

His dispatch to the President reads:

"Although I have had, as you of course know, serious doubts and misgivings as to some parts of the League covenant, I am nevertheless convinced that Germany would obtain a material advantage and would come out of the war practically a victor were the treaty amended or were any reservations adopted. To my mind it is the treaty or no treaty, and I for one am not willing to assume the frightful responsibility of precipitating chaos upon the world by some hazardous amendment or reservation.

"I have studied this tremendous question from every angle and am sure that at this juncture I can render my country, indeed the entire civilized world, a great service by voting for the treaty without amendments or reservations."

DELAY AMENDMENT TO LET JOHNSON GO

Anti-League Senator Gets Consent to Resume Today His Tour on Wilson's Trail.

7 SENATORS WARN LODGE

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—After receiving assurances that no move would be made to bring up his amendment for the equalization of the votes of the United States and Great Britain in the League of Nations Assembly, under the Versailles treaty, during his absence from the capital, Senator Johnson of California announced late today that he would resume his anti-League stumping tour tomorrrow, going directly to the Pacific Coast.

This decision was reached by Mr. Johnson after conferences with Senator Lodge, the majority leader, and Senator Swanson, one of the minority leaders. Senator Johnson was assured that the other amendments to the treaty proposed by the majority of the Foreign Relations Committee would be taken up and disposed of before his amendment was moved.

Mr. Johnson wanted to be on hand to join in the debate on his amendment, he told Mr. Lodge and Mr. Swanson, and would abandon his trip, much as he desired to resume it, unless he were certain that nothing would be done concerning it in his absence.

Senator Lenroot of Wisconsin, one of the leaders of the "mild reservationists," acting for his confrères in that group, informed Mr. Lodge and Mr. Swanson today that at least seven Senators were opposed to having the Johnson amendment brought up at this time. They wanted opportunity, he said, to attempt a compromise on a reservation covering the proposal. Bluntly he told the two Senators that if an effort were made to force the Johnson amendment to a vote, in opposition to their attempt at compromise, they would vote against its consideration.

Associated with Mr. Lenroot in this move, he told the two Senators, were Messrs. McCumber, McNary, Nelson, Kellogg, Hale, and Colt. Others of the "mild reservationists," he said, might join them. The votes of the seven Senators would be sufficient to block any attempt by the leaders, were they so disposed, to move the Johnson amendment.

Mr. Lodge assured Mr. Lenroot that the Republican leaders had no intention of moving the amendment with Mr. Johnson away from the Capital. Mr. Swanson said that he was entirely willing to have the vote come after all the other proposed amendments have been voted on. This was understood to reflect the feeling of Mr. Hitchcock, who announced in the Senate several days ago that he would not force up the amendment in Mr. Johnson's absence.

Johnson to Trail Wilson.

With the leaders on both sides willing to await the convenience of Mr. Johnson and the latter having the further assurance from Mr. Lenroot that if the amendment were moved, the seven reservationists would throw their votes against taking it up, Mr. Johnson felt at liberty to leave the Capital. He will Italian Circles in Paris Excited Over Report of Wilson's Reply on Fiume.

RUMOR FIUME IS ANNEXED

SERBIAN ARMY ON WATCH

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 25.—It is said in Italian circles here tonight that President Wilson's reply on Fiume has been received in Rome and constitutes a flat rejection of Italian claims to the city, coupled with a threat of an economic blockade of Italy if she holds on to Fiume in defiance of the Peace Conference.

A report is all over Paris that the Italian Crown Council has declared Fiume annexed to Italy. The Italian peace delegation can neither affirm nor deny this rumor.

Italians here are in a high state of excitement, and feeling against Mr. Wilson is running strong. They declare that England and France would not join an economic blockade of Italy, and that the American President cannot enforce it alone.

The crisis in Italy is regarded as most acute and containing all the elements of revolution. The Nitti Government is plainly confronted with a situation it cannot handle in dealing with d'Annunzio's coup at Fiume.

The situation is fast threatening to become more than an Italian affair. D'Annunzio now makes it plain that he is for Italy getting not only Fiume out and out, but all the Dalmatian coast. The Jugoslavs say they will never stand for this, and already are making strong representation to the Peace Conference. It is not putting it too strongly to say that the Supreme Council has found it necessary to bring pressure to bear upon the Jugoslavs to restrain them. The Supreme Council is anxious to give Italy a free chance to work out her own salvation in the crisis without hindrance.

Jugoslavs late today issued a statement denying that their armies were mobilizing for a march on d'Annunzio's forces at Fiume.

Report King May Abdicate.

PARIS, Sept. 25, (Associated Press.)—Paris was alive today with unconfirmed rumors concerning the resignation of Signor Tittoni, the Italian Foreign Minister; the decision of Italy formally to annex Fiume, and the possible abdication of King Victor Emmanuel.

A Rome dispatch dated Wednesday quotes the Epoca as stating that Serbian regulars and Jugoslav volunteers have taken up positions dominating Monte Nevoso, about twenty miles north of Fiume, and are guarding the Regina Basin and the San Pietro-Fiume Railway.

The same dispatch says the Italian Commander at Fiume has taken the military precautions made necessary by this circumstance.

A Jugoslav communiqué received here says that Gabriele d'Annunzio's troops have arrested numerous Jugoslavs in Fiume and have pillaged a Jugoslav printing shop there. Thousands of refugees from Fiume and Susak, it adds, are arriving in Zagreb (Agram) and other Croatian towns, asking the Jugoslav Government to intervene and protect the interests of the Jugoslavs.

General Giuseppe (Peppino) Garibaldi in an interview printed in the Petit Parisian this morning reproaches the great powers for not having given Italy all that was promised in the Treaty of London, and declares it to be the intention of the Italian people to keep Fiume "even at the price of another war."

"It depends on France and England," he says, "whose populations are with Italy in the Fiume affair. Whatever may be President Wilson's answer to Italy's proposals, we will say to him that this dispute is between Europeans and must be settled between Europeans. We know the American, French, and British peoples are with us in this matter."

TRIESTE, Wednesday, Sept. 24, (Associated Press.)—Gabriele d'Annunzio is preparing to make his position in Fiume strategically stronger by extending his cordon of guards beyond the town to the high land surrounding it, according to information brought from Fiume by persons who have been privileged to pass in and out of the town. This will include the occupation of Susak, the hills of which overlook Fiume.

The occupation of Sussak would be necessary to control the bridgehead lead-

Tokio Plans Early Steps For Shantung Settlement

TOKIO, Sept. 25, (Associated Press.)—Japan is planning officially to invite China to confer on the Shantung situation after Japan has ratified the Peace Treaty. This fact was communicated to the correspondent today by officials, who added that Japan naturally could not compel China to accept the invitation.

"Japan," said one official, "is anxious to settle the question of the restoration of Shantung as quickly as possible, but if China declines to negotiate Japan will be obliged to allow the present conditions as to Shantung to remain unchanged."

BARRED FROM HOME AFTER RENT IS PAID

W. F. Heide Finds New Tenant in His Apartment 15 Days Before Lease Expires.

District Attorney Says Renter Agreed to Protect Landlord Against Damage Suits.

William F. Heide, Vice President of the Henry Heide Corporation, at 313 to 321 Hudson Street, was locked out of his apartment at 838 West End Avenue by a new tenant who invaded it on Sept. 16, fifteen days before Heide's lease and paid rental expired, and had to get the aid of the District Attorney yesterday to regain possession of his home.

The locks on the doors had been replaced, and the keys were held by the new tenant. For ten days Mr. and Mrs. Heide were barred from their home, and they were not permitted to get any of their personal effects. The keys were not surrendered until after the District Attorney sent detectives to the house to break in the door.

"This is the most outrageous landlord and tenant case that has come to our attention," said A. J. Talley, Chief Assistant District Attorney. "We are preparing to prosecute criminally every one concerned in barring Heide from his property. Heide had a lease for the apartment, which does not expire until Oct. 1, and had paid his rent to that date.

"On Sept. 15 Philip Katz, proprietor of the Philip Katz Company at 11 East Twenty-sixth Street, invaded the Heide apartment while the Heides were in the country and put painters and paperhangers at work so that the place would be ready for his occupancy on Oct. 1, from which date his lease was to begin. Heide for several years had paid a rental of $2,800 for the apartment. Katz got the lease by paying $3,200.

"Katz was enabled to take possession of Heide's rooms by an arrangement with the rental agent of the property, Frederick Zittel, at Seventy-ninth Street and Broadway. Katz told the agent that if he would let him go into the apartment he, Katz, would assume responsibility and would indemnify the owner or agent for any claim for damages that might be made by Heide. Katz signed an agreement to that effect.

"Today we compelled Katz to give the keys of the new locks to Heide, and he is now in his home. We shall prosecute Katz, the agent, and the superintendent of the building, Elson Freise, by placing the charges before the Grand Jury. Heide tells me he also will bring a civil action for damages."

Drove Woman Out of Building.

Mr. Heide and his wife were at their Summer home at Plandome, L. I., until Sept. 15. On that day Mrs. Heide returned and found her home in the possession of workmen. Her furnishings and personal effects had been stored in five rooms of the ten-room apartment. Parts of the floors in other rooms had been torn up and paper had been removed from the walls. Her protests drove the workmen out. She locked the hall door after notifying her husband and returned to Plandome.

Mr. Talley said that on the following day Zittel, the agent, ordered the workmen to return. When Mr. and Mrs. Heide again sought to go to their apartment their way was barred by the superintendent, it was said, who had ordered that they were not to be permitted to use the elevator. According to the District Attorney, the Heides live on the fourth floor and there is no stairway from the entrance on the first floor.

"Mrs. Heide was virtually ejected from the apartment building four times by this refusal to permit her to enter an elevator," said Mr. Talley. "Mr. Heide again went there yesterday and demanded admission, but was refused. There is a rear stairs and a fire-escape stairway, and Heide finally reached his rooms, but could not open the door because the locks had been changed. He then got a summons for Freise to the West Side Court on a charge of unlaw-

Day Passes Without Disorder, Except for Shooting by State Police at Farrell, Penn.

Day's Strike Developments.

Developments in the steel strike yesterday were:

1. Pittsburgh District. — Neither side claimed any great gains, although each contended the flow of labor was going its way.

2. Chicago District.—A number of plants showed an apparent increase of activity, but claims of employers that several thousand men had returned were stoutly denied by strike leaders.

3. Ohio District.—Industry has been almost completely paralyzed, but skilled and semi-skilled workers in the Mahoning Valley have called a meeting for today to vote on return.

4. Buffalo District—Three unions of Great Lakes Steamship Workers voted for sympathetic strike.

5. Colorado District. — Conference held at Pueblo between workers and officials of the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company to seek basis of settlement.

6. Bethlehem Steel Company refuses to confer with union leaders and union men vote for strike on Monday, though National Committee has not yet acted.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Penn., Sept. 25.—While asserting that the tendency of strikers to dribble back to the plants is continuing, officials of the Carnegie Steel Company said tonight that the strike might take a sudden turn either way and that the situation might suddenly become far worse in the mills.

Secretary W. Z. Foster, of the committee organizing the steel workers, claimed no additional gains, but declared that there should be no desertions from their ranks.

"We would rather see the strike continue for six months," said an official of the Carnegie Steel Company, who saw reporters here at the company office today, "rather than see it won by the men conducting the present strike. We believe the country could well afford to suffer indefinitely from a shortage of steel, rather than have a victory of this magnitude won by such men as Foster and the other leaders, because it would put the entire American Federation of Labor under the leadership of the radicals.

"If these organizers won, they would control the steel workers, and the stockyards men who were organized by them. With these vast bodies controlled by radicals, and with the radicals nearly in control of the miners, these leaders would win the control of the American Federation of Labor from top to bottom, but I can tell you that, no matter how long the strike may last, we will win it eventually without yielding in any particular.

"I would not say that the strike had even reached a serious stage yet. I am not going to say that it is not going to. A man would be foolish to hazard a guess. In normal times I might not hesitate to say, on the face of things as they appear today, that the strike was over, but with the prosperity which the steel workers have enjoyed—with the alien workers, who constitute the bulk of the strikers, carrying from $500 to $1,500 in their money belts; with the doubt as to what the railroad men may do in the way of sympathetic action, it is entirely too early to predict what will happen.

Reports a Few Men Returning.

"A few additional men have been coming back to work every day, but there has been no general break into the mills. There has been no sabotage so far, but it is possible that the agitators have made their way back into the mills as workmen and are working for the strike from the inside.

"We calculate that it will take ten days at least before the shortage in steel production resulting from the strike begins to affect the automobile industry and the manufacturer of other machinery to the extent that they are obliged to lay off men. Most of the steel manufacturing plants ordinarily have a week or ten days' stock of steel at their plants."

Judge Gary for Himself Declines to Arbitrate or to Confer with Fitzpatrick and His Aids

Judge Elbert H. Gary was informed in writing last night at the Hotel Ritz-Carlton, where he was a guest at a dinner, that John Fitzpatrick, leader of the steel strikers, had informed the Senate investigating committee that twenty-four unions were willing to submit all issues of the strike to arbitration, the arbitrators to be selected by President Wilson, and that Fitzpatrick had said this would end the walk-out. Asked what his attitude would be toward Fitzpatrick's proposal, Judge Gary wrote the following comment:

The Board of Directors of the United States Steel Corporation are the representatives of nearly 150,000 stockholders, including 60,000 to 70,000 employes. We are their servants, and are selected to represent and protect their interests and also the interests of all our 250,000 employes, the majority of whom, I think, are not members of labor unions. Moreover, I believe our corporation is under great obligation to the general public concerning the issues involved in the pending strike.

In these circumstances I would not at present assume to answer the question propounded to me. However, I will say for myself that questions of moral principle cannot be arbitrated nor compromised, and, in my opinion, such questions are included in the present unfortunate struggle. I also think we cannot negotiate or confer with Mr. Fitzpatrick and his associates as union leaders concerning our employes whom these gentlemen have volunteered to represent.

Bethlehem Company Won't Confer

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 25.—President E. G. Grace of the Bethlehem Steel Company has refused to confer with the Steelworkers' National Committee, and declares that his company will not depart from its present system of collective bargaining with its employes, William Z. Foster, Secretary of the National Committee for Organizing Steel and Iron Workers, announced here tonight.

After considering the steel company's reply, Secretary Foster said that the National Advisory Committee had decided to notify the employes of the Bethlehem Company of Mr. Grace's attitude and refer the matter to the National Committee for Organizing Iron and Steel Workers. But the General Committee of Workers at the Bethlehem plant voted tonight to strike on Monday.

PREMIER AVERTING NATIONAL STRIKE

STRIKE SET FOR TONIGHT

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—Late afternoon reports today indicated that the national railway strike will be averted. Sir Eric Geddes had a two hours' conference with the railway men's Executive Committee this morning and there was further discussion this afternoon. Between the two meetings Lloyd George held a ministerial council at the Premier's residence, 10 Downing Street, where the managers of the railroads who formed what was known as the "Railway Executive" during the war were summoned.

Just before the adjournment of the Downing Street conference an official of the National Union of Railwaymen said: "I think we are making some progress toward settlement, but we are a long way from the end yet."

It is also stated that at several stages of the negotiations there was some very plain speaking, but that a spirit of compromise appeared to prevail, and on all hands there are great hopes of a settlement being reached tomorrow.

When Sir Eric Geddes assumed control of the railroads as Minister of Transportation yesterday the functions of the Railway Executive as a body came to an end and members of it sent in their collective resignation. Sir Eric thanked them and intimated that he would have great need of their assistance in their individual capacities. Thus it was as individuals and not in their corporate capacity that the managers went to Downing Street.

Pending formation of public opinion on the rights and wrongs of the dispute between the Government and the railway men, both sides are being castigated for their methods of conducting negotiations. Both parties are described as having resorted to methods of the Stone Age, when a blow with a flint axe was regarded as the most telling argument.

Some confusion seems to have been created by the use of the word "definitive" in the Board of Trade's reply to the National Union of Railway Men. The writer apparently used it in the sense of "definite," but the union's Executive Committee interpreted it in its Century dictionary meaning of final conclusion.

LONDON, Sept. 25, (Associated Press.)—It was understood tonight that the Government today made a new proposal to the representatives of the National Union of Railway Men who are threatening a general strike on Friday unless their demands for a basis for the standardization of wages are settled meantime.

The disputes between the railway men

Assert Mills Are Trying to Impress Strikers—Foreigners Leaving for Europe.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 25.—While more chimneys began to belch smoke in the Chicago steel strike zone today there was no decided change in the situation along the Lake shore from South Chicago to Gary. The Illinois Steel Company lighted up two more furnaces in its Bessemer plant at South Chicago, making six now in operation. The "2-00" plate mill likewise was said to have started up, while the slab mill has been running for a day. A foreman declared 500 men were at work in the Bessemer mill, and 600 in the slab mill.

"All the departments in the plant will be running at limited capacity within a week," added the foreman.

Union leaders denied these assertions. They declared that pickets on watch at the gates found few returning workers, and that the plant was practically shut down. They tell the strikers that the fires are burning for the psychological effect upon the workers.

At Gary the United States Steel Corporation reopened five more batteries of coke ovens, making seventy-five in all. The Bessemer converters were blown during the day, but it was reported that the equipment had been tampered with and they closed down again.

The company is now reported ready to reopen its rail mill at Gary following the reopening of the coke ovens. The slab mill was declared to be running, unofficial reports being that 4,000 men were at work in the Gary mills. This was challenged by union leaders, who asserted that a dozen men with a dozen shovels and twelve tons of coal could produce as much smoke as was pouring from the smoke stacks.

Strikers Take Life Easy.

Along the streets of the mill towns strikers took life easy, as they have since Monday. The situation was quiet. One change, significant perhaps, was the appearance of many strikers in their ordinary weekday clothes. To talk with them on the street corners, there was apparently no change in their attitude. But automobiles dashing from home to home picking up workers and small groups which filtered through the gates of some of the plants throughout the day indicated that the movement back to the mills is apparently on. How strong it is almost impossible to discover. Information of any exactitude is difficult to obtain from either side.

Both sides are optimistic and have the usual tendency to exaggeration.

The Inland Steel Company at Indiana Harbor has about 6,000 workmen who are said to be only about 20 per cent.

SENATORS START INQUIRY

IF WILSON APPOINTS JUDGES

PUTS FULL BLAME ON GARY

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—John Fitzpatrick, Chairman of the national committee of organized steel workers who brought on the nation-wide steel strike, announced late this afternoon to the Senate Investigating Committee in answer to a question by Chairman Kenyon, of Iowa, that the strikers would without question be willing to leave the settlement of their controversy with the United States Steel Corporation and other plants involved in the present strike to the decision of any arbitration board that might be selected by President Wilson. He said that if the Steel Corporation would agree to let the President settle the dispute by arbitration the steel workers would return to their jobs and would abide by any decision reached by the President and his arbitrators.

The statement from Mr. Fitzpatrick came at the close of the first day's session of the steel strike investigation begun by the Senate Committee on Education and Labor. Senator Kenyon, it was reported, will try to get into communication with President Wilson tonight to acquaint him with Fitzpatrick's offer and seek his aid in bringing the strike to an end by arbitration. It is also believed that Senator Kenyon will try to interest E. H. Gary, Chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, who is scheduled to be a witness before the committee next Wednesday, in acting on the labor leader's suggestion.

"If the United States Steel Corporation," Senator Kenyon asked Mr. Fitzpatrick, "will agree to submit all matters in dispute to arbitration, do you think that would end the strike?"

"Yes, I am sure that would end the strike," Fitzpatrick replied.

"Would you agree to let President Wilson select the arbitration board to which would be intrusted the settlement of the controversy?"

"Yes. I cannot personally call the strike off, but if that is done I am sure the men would be willing to end the strike that way."

"And you are willing to end it by arbitration and to stand by the decision of the board?" asked the Senator.

"I am," Fitzpatrick answered.

During the five hours he was on the stand Fitzpatrick was examined concerning every phase of the strike. He alleged that a majority of the steel workers were living under conditions worse than those surrounding paupers in public institutions. He swore that in Pennsylvania strikers and their leaders were denied the right of free speech and free assembly, and that, in his opinion, murder and assault were being committed at the instigation of persons high in authority in the steel business. He admitted that he had not visited the places where these crimes were alleged to have been committed and that his evidence was hearsay. He denied that Bolshevism had permeated the ranks of the strikers and denounced the Pennsylvania Constabulary as an organization dominated by the corporations. The acts of the constables in strike districts paralleled the worst features of Cossack atrocities in Russia under the Romanoffs.

Fitzpatrick very frankly admitted that the steel strike was called as the result of a referendum vote, in which only 100,000 of the 500,000 that he says are now involved, voted. In reply to questions by Senator Kenyon he said that the National Committee which organized the strike, considered that when the union strength in the mills had increased to 100,000, the committee was justified in demanding a conference with Judge Gary, and that when he refused, in calling on the 100,000 to vote whether or not there should be a strike in the whole industry. He said that the Bethlehem employes are now voting on the strike proposition.

"Did you have a correct report as to the proportion of men who voted for the strike when you made your request for a conference to Judge Gary," asked Senator Smith.

"No, Sir; only the men actually in the Federation at the time voted; 98 per cent. of them voted to strike."

"Did your reports show how all the men voted?"

"Yes."

"What was the total membership in the mills at the time the vote was taken?"

"I have said about 100,000. That was one-fifth, and we considered that number gave us the right to demand a conference with Gary.

"And so 100,000 voted for a strike to involve 500,000 men?"

"Yes; but we had 50,000 more by the time the vote was counted."

When he first took the stand Mr. Fitzpatrick said the strikers were ready to submit all the information in their possession to the Committee and that their files, would be at the service of the Senators.

"I have been informed," said Mr. Fitzpatrick, in opening his testimony, "that about twenty years ago the Steel Corporation set aside a fund, variously estimated at from $2,000,000 to $20,000,000, which was appropriated for the purpose of destroying the influence of organized labor in the steel industry. The corporation has since that time conducted a relentless campaign which had succeeded in practically destroying the last vestige of unionism in the industry. The result was that in 1918 the American Federation of Labor came to the realization that it had to organize the steel industry, no matter at what cost.

"You must keep in mind, Senators, that in the steel industry hours are long and wages are low; so low, in fact, as to be below the pauper line. Taking all these things into consideration, the American Federation of Labor realized that because of the intimate relation of the steel to all other industries, it was necessary to organize it, and so it was that the Federation at its 1918 convention in St. Paul authorized the so-called National Committee for the Organization of the Iron and Steel Industry, of which Mr. Gompers was the first Chairman, and which I am now the head. This committee represents twenty-four great international unions whose men are identified with the steel industry, as mechanics, electricians and in various other capacities."

At first, said the witness, owing to the limited finances at the disposal of the committee, its work was confined to the Calumet Steel district, of which Chicago is the centre. The men there, he said, responded by thousands. As a result the operators announced they were going to establish the eight-hour day, but the men kept on organizing. The committee began organizing in the Pittsburgh district in the Fall of 1918 and there met its first real opposition.

"Our first opposition was experienced at McKeesport," continued Mr. Fitzpatrick, "and there we were informed that the federation organizers would not be permitted to meet in that city. We went before the Mayor and we told him that we were members of the American Federation of Labor and that we wanted to come into that district to organize the workers. The Mayor informed us that under no circumstances could we hold meetings in McKeesport. We then came to Washington and conferred with Mr. Gompers and he wrote letters to the Mayor and also the Governor of Pennsylvania. My impression is that neither of these letters brought an answer.

Opposed at McKeesport.

"This was the beginning of the trouble. If we rented a hall, the rent was returned and we were turned out. If we met in the streets we were arrested. We met the same kind of opposition in Duquesne and in Homestead. So we proceeded to get along as best we could. We held meetings in the outskirts of the towns, or we met the men at their homes and some times in the churches. This was all in the latter part of 1918. There was a lull during the Winter months. In the Spring of this year we again resumed active organization efforts and by May we had 80,000 steel workers enrolled.

"About this time the National Convention of the Steel, Iron and Tin Workers' Union was held in Louisville and this convention ordered a letter written to Judge Gary in which he was asked to discuss matters in general with the representatives of the workers. Judge Gary replied that he could not agree to a discussion and informed them that the old policy would be continued and that the corporation officials would refuse to meet with the representatives of organized labor.

"By June last we had increased our membership to more than 300,000 men, one-fifth of the men employed in the steel mills. President Gompers wrote Judge Gary asking for a conference, but the letter was ignored and has not been answered to this day. In the meantime, the United States Steel Corporation was resorting to all forms of duress in an effort to thwart the efforts of the American Federation of Labor.

"In July, the twenty-four International Unions represented on the National Committee for Organizing the Steel and Iron Industry voted to call on the men of their unions for a strike vote."

These unions voted almost unanimously for a strike unless an agreement could be reached with Mr. Gary.

"Did you have," asked Senator Jones of New Mexico, "a report as to the actual proportion of those men who voted for this strike?"

"No sir, I did not. The vote showed we had one-fifth of the men and we felt that we had a right to ask for consideration for that fifth."

"In other words, if I understand you correctly, these 100,000 men voted for a strike that was to involve 500,000 men," said Senator Sterling of South Dakota.

"By the time we finished counting the first 100,000 we had gained 50,000 more members," replied Mr. Fitzpatrick.

"Well, what is your strength in the steel industry now?"

"Yesterday it was 340,000 men."

Strike Had to be Called.

"If Judge Gary had consented to a conference would there have been a strike?" Senator Kenyon asked.

"No, the strike would not have been called had that course been followed," answered the labor leader.

"Well, if he agreed to confer now would the strike end?"

"I doubt that. The 350,000 men now on strike will not go back until they are given a guarantee of decent treatment. Their brothers and sisters have been murdered, their homes invaded, and they will not abandon their just claims now. All they expect is common ordinary justice."

"Is it a fact that the real cause of the strike was due to Judge Gary's failure to agree to a conference?"

"Yes. If we had conferred we would, of course, have presented our demands."

"We would be interested to hear your reason for refusing to postpone the strike as requested by the President."

"The date had been set and if we had postponed it we would have been shot to pieces. It was impossible to postpone it."

"What do you mean by being shot to pieces?"

"I mean our organizatic would have been shot to pieces, so to speak, and our men shot up. The men were being subjected to intimidation and were being given the choice of tearing up their union cards or quitting work. A condition of terrorism existed in the steel fields."

"When did all this terrorism you talk about begin?" asked Senator Sterling.

Fitzpatrick Charges Murder.

"In June last, when all sorts of tactics were adopted to terrorize the men, have you heard of the murder of Fanny Snelling at Breckinridge, Penn.? There was a coal strike on and she had gone there as one of our American Federation of Labor organizers."

Waving a photograph of the body of Fanny Snelling, the witness said dramatically:

"A picket, a man 60 years of age, was shot down in cold blood. Several children were attracted by the firing. This woman came around the corner of the alley and saw the children. Then the gunmen appeared. She was afraid the children would be shot. She reached down and pulled up her skirts and pulled them around the children in a corner. Immediately the gunmen fired and killed her."

"Who were these gunmen?" asked Chairman Kenyon.

"They were men employed by the companies to intimidate the workers. The shooting was done by Deputy Sheriffs and by gunmen acting with the latter. Our information is that these gunmen were employed as mill guards. We don't know where their pay comes from."

"What was the provocation that led to this unfortunate affair of which you speak," asked Senator MacLean of Connecticut.

"It is our judgment that Fanny Snelling was killed in a campaign of terror ordered by the steel men for the purpose of putting the fear of God into the hearts of the workers."

"Has the prosecution of these men whom you charge with murder been started?"

"It is our experience that you cannot get prosecution in cases like this."

"Do you know what was done in this case? Please answer," said Senator MacLean.

"No prosecution has been started, so far as I know. The men who murdered the woman were held in $2,500 bail. A man who was arrested for speaking in the street was held in $3,000."

"Was the old man, the picket, who was killed, armed?"

"He was not."

Reverting to the strike vote of the 100,000 men who, it was submitted, represented only one-fifth of the men employed in the steel industry, Senator Phipps of Colorado wanted to know if the strike committee ascertained how many of the 100,000 were employes of the United States Steel Corporation before they sought a conference with Mr. Gary. Mr. Fitzpatrick replied that the committee decided that all of the men who voted were so employed. The committee that tried to see Mr. Gary was appointed by the heads of the twenty-four unions.

"Judge Gary says you did not represent his employes," remarked Senator Smith of Georgia.

"Well, the answer is very apparent at this moment, for 340,000 of his men are on the streets," replied the witness.

At this point the nationality of the men who are on strike was brought up. Mr. Fitzpatrick said that practically all the strikers had been Americanized as a result of the stoppage of immigration.

"A few years ago we had to use thirteen languages to talk to them, but now we use only one, and that is English," he said. "As a matter of fact, the only native Americans are the Indians, and even Gary is not a native American. I want to say that these steel men stood by this country with all they had in the great war. The steel industry was the first line trench of industry, and these men manned those trenches and held them until the war was won. I don't think it fair now to impugn their motives. The President knows what they did and he appreciates it, too. I want to say that we put our whole case in the President's hands, and he said that we were entitled to a hearing and that he would try and get it for us."

Calls Constabulary Cossacks.

"Do you mean to say that President Wilson tried to arrange a conference with Judge Gary for your committee?" Senator Kenyon asked.

"There is no doubt about it. The President told us he tried to get Judge Gary to see us, but that he failed. He said, however, that he was still hopeful and that he would try again. He did so, but his efforts were fruitless."

"Do you mean to say that Judge Gary would not grant you a conference even when the request was made by the President of the United States?"

"Yes, Sir, that's the case. In the meantime the terroristic conditions continued and the strike remained our only means of defense. Now I want to say that if the State of Pennsylvania continues to let things go on as it is now doing, the strike will not be confined to the steel industry. If conditions now existing continue there is no telling where it all will end. In Homestead the State Constabulary, we call them the Cossacks, ride down the people when they are in peaceable assembly. They have even ridden into the homes of the workers. I know of an instance where one of the constables rode his horse into a workingman's kitchen and the horse kicked over a boiling pot that scalded the steel worker's wife, and that woman was in a delicate condition.

"A few days ago at Homestead, while a meeting was in progress, seven of these constables rode into the crowd and pulled the speakers from the platform and placed them under arrest, and the men arrested were officers of the American Federation of Labor. The constabulary of Pennsylvania is a strike-breaking institution now employed to terrorize the people in the steel districts. At Duquesne the authorities give the men the choice of going back to work or going to jail and they are going to jail. There are now 150 of our men in jail at Newcastle."

"Is this strike, in your opinion, confined to the United States Steel Corporation?"

"It is not our intention to so confine it. The United States Steel Corporation, however, dominates the steel situation. At the present time the Bethlehem Company is not involved, but I think the men in Bethlehem are taking a strike vote now."

"Did you order the strike confined to the Steel Corporation?"

"No. It is directed against the industry. We feel that this strike is just as much an effort to sustain President Wilson now as our remaining at work during the war and doing all that we could to win the war sustained him during those months of stress. Here is a great corporation that raises an army, refuses to heed the request of the President of the United States, and in the opinion of the men on strike, no outside nation can possibly be bigger than President Wilson."

Senator Phipps asked the witness if he had had any practical experience in the steel industry. Fitzpatrick replied that he was a horse shoer by trade and had never worked in a steel mill and added, in answer to other questions, that he was not even familiar with the wage schedules in the various mills. He said he understood that the common laborers in the Calumet district receive 30 cents an hour. Some of the skilled mechanics, he added, received as high as $20, $50, $60 and even $80 a week. The $80 men were few in number and their work represented the highest degree of skilled labor.

"You have said the steel wages are mere pittances. Do you base that statement on?" asked Senator Phipps.

"Yes Sir, I do. They have no home life. They work twelve hours a day and 365 days in a year. It's not money they want. They want happiness. They want a chance to enjoy a decent standard of living. The twelve-hour day is the general basis throughout the steel industry. Skilled laborers may get as high as $80 a day, but I tell you they deserve it and they earn it."

"Speaking of conditions in Pennsylvania, have you ever lived in that State?"

"I have been there and I lived in Pittsburgh two weeks. I said they worked twelve hours a day and I should have added they also work seven days a week."

"Now do you know of a single steel plant that operates seven days a week? Of course, we all know the furnaces must be kept going."

"That is the general complaint of the men."

At the afternoon session Senator Phipps asked Mr. Fitzpatrick for his authority for the statement that the Steel Corporation was reported to have set aside from $2,000,000 to $20,000,000 to break up organized steel labor. Mr. Fitzpatrick said his information was hearsay.

"Have you any definite information?" asked Senator Phipps.

"Only that we felt the effect of it, for the organization was destroyed in the mills."

"Well, I have heard," said Senator Phipps, "but I have no proof of it, that $1,000,000 was set aside by the American Federation of Labor in 1912 to be used in organizing the steel industry."

"No such appropriation was ever made by the federation," the witness answered.

He insisted that no definite appropriation had been made to finance the present strike. The expenses of the Strike Committee and organizers, he added, was limited to $60,000 a year. His salary was $75 a week, in addition to traveling and hotel expenses. The financing of the present strike was yet to be settled. Asked his authority for the statement that the Steel Corporation had threatened to put out of business men who encouraged strikes, Fitzpatrick said the information came to the unions.

"Why," he said, "they tell our men that if they don't go back to work they will evict them from their homes and throw them out into the streets."

Calls Officials Bolsheviki.

"Are you quoting the men when you say that," Senator Sterling asked.

"Yes. It comes to me from our own organizers. I have not been there myself."

"Will you kindly give us the names of the men, the organizers or whoever it was that heard those threats," Senator Kenyon asked.

"Yes; I will get the names for you. The citizens of McKeesport are so terrorized that they do not talk to each other, as I have already informed you."

"What's the population of McKeesport?"

"I should say about 150,000. If the committee will go up there without letting the authorities know of their coming, you will see for yourself that what I say is true. Of course, if they hear you are coming, conditions will appear such as to indicate that all is harmony during the time you are there. It would surely open your eyes. When-ever I go into western Pennsylvania I kiss my wife and babies good-bye, for I never expect to see them again."

Asked what his definition of a closed shop is Fitzpatrick replied that it is a mill where only union men are employed.

"Some people," said Senator Phipps, "think it is a place where only union men are employed. Is the open shop an issue in this strike?"

"No; it is not. All this talk about a closed shop represents an effort on the part of Judge Gary to confuse the public as to the real issue. The issue at this time is due entirely to Judge Gary's refusal to meet us. There is nothing else in the situation."

"Who prepared the demands that you have sent to the steel mill operators?"

"The National Committee."

"How can you say the wage scale in the steel mills is below the pauper line when wages go as high as $80 a day?"

"That is money. What we want is happiness, not money."

"Well, how about the $30 a day men?"

"I am not conversant with the employment of those men; the great mass of the men are in the 40 cents an hour class."

"What are the earnings of the United States Steel Corporation?"

"In the war, I was informed, it was about $1,000,000 a day profit. If they can get comfort out of that money they are welcome to it. I think they might give their men time enough at least to catch their breath."

"Are these men Bolsheviki who are on strike; that is, are any considerable number of them?" asked Senator Kenyon.

"The only Bolsheviki are the mill town officials."

"What about Secretary William Z. Foster of your committee? What part does he play in directing this strike?" asked Senator Kenyon.

"Foster is the Secretary of the committee and has worked as an organizer and made speeches, I believe."

"Are you, Mr. Fitzpatrick, opposed to the breaking of law?"

"Absolutely, I am. I place my American citizenship second to that of no man."

"Does Mr. Foster do that, too?" Senator Kenyon asked.

"Certainly he does. These writings of Foster which have been quoted in the newspapers were written years ago. They are things of the past, dead things. They do not represent Foster's present views. He has changed his mind since he wrote that book on syndicalism."

"Foster says a syndicalist is an anti-patriot and speaks of internationalism. You say he has changed now?"

"There is no doubt of the change that has come over Foster. He is absolutely loyal and did everything he could for his country during the war. He jokes now about that book written in his early days when he associated with radicals. He has both feet on the ground now and sees things right."

It was at this point that Fitzpatrick informed Senator Kenyon that he would be willing to let President Wilson settle the strike by arbitration.

Samuel Gompers will take the stand when the hearing is resumed at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Committee to Call Foster.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25, (Associated Press.)—In Executive session late this afternoon following the testimony of John Fitzpatrick, Chairman of the striking steel workers' organization, the Senate Committee on Labor and Education, which is investigating the steel strike, decided to call Secretary Foster of the strikers' committee for testimony next Saturday and to hear no further witnesses until Chairman Gary of the Steel Corporation is examined next Wednesday. The committee decided not to visit the strike district this week, but may go late next week.

William H. Rubin, counsel for the strikers, who accompanied Fitzpatrick at the outset of the hearing, asked what assurance had been given by Elbert H. Gary, Chairman of the Board of the United States Steel Corporation, that he would appear before the committee next Wednesday.

Senator Kenyon, Chairman of the committee, replied that Judge Gary had telephoned him that he would be present Wednesday, and added that "until that time we will not question his being here."

Rubin requested that the committee place in the record correspondence between Joseph P. Tumulty, secretary to the President; Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, and Chairman Fitzpatrick, regarding efforts to postpone the strike. Senator Kenyon asked Rubin to read the telegrams and letters, which have been published.

After he had told of the efforts to organize the steel workers, Fitzpatrick was asked by Senator Jones, Democrat, New Mexico, if the steel workers had made application to the American Federation of Labor for organization, or whether the movement had been initiated by the American Federation of Labor.

"The American Federation of Labor initiated the movement," Fitzpatrick replied.

"Was there no movement of the men inviting the organization?" asked Senator Jones.

"No, only as the men met in different localities and expressed their desires."

"Why was it incumbent on the American Federation of Labor to organize the steel industry?" Senator Jones asked.

"It was a bad spot in the industrial situation," Fitzpatrick replied.

These conditions, he added, led other large employers to consider imposing similar conditions on their employes, and so for the benefit of organized workers everywhere in the country organization of the steel industry was deemed essential by the leaders of the labor movement.

Tells Some of Demands.

Replying to a question if the steel corporation only was aimed at, Fitzpatrick replied: "We struck wherever we were organized, without regard to the name on the door."

He enumerated among demands which the strikers made the eight-hour day, abolition of physical examination for workmen, and collective bargaining.

"The check-off system is one of the things you have demanded," Senator Phipps said. "That means that you want the companies to collect union dues from the workmen's pay envelopes and turn it over to your organization."

"No, it's just a little financial arrangement adopted by common consent of employers and employes to save friction," Fitzpatrick said.

"Yes, and it is also a strong element in making a closed shop," Senator Phipps returned.

Senator Phipps asked if the American Federation of Labor had attempted organization of the unskilled workers in the steel industry.

"Yes, continuously," Fitzpatrick replied, "but the opposition and control of the towns in Western Pennsylvania are such that organizations can't operate. Men's civil and legal rights are shoved aside. The autocracy of this corporation dominates the situation. We feel that it is a dangerous situation and a menace to this Government."

"You think that part of Pennsylvania is not safe for democracy," Chairman Kenyon interrupted.

"Yes, it's tyranny," said Fitzpatrick. "I don't think its equal ever existed even in darkest Russia."

Senators asked what wages were being paid to organizers by the unions. These were $8 a day, the witness said, with $6 daily for expenses.

"Don't you think there is a third party at interest in these strikes, the public," Senator Kenyon asked.

"Yes, and we went to the President and laid our case before him because he represents the public," Fitzpatrick replied.

In ending he asked the committee to "help us get the workers' citizenship rights returned in Pennsylvania."

"You'll not have much time to act," he said. "God knows where this thing is going to end or what will happen if they keep on trampling on women and children, and beating men's heads off."

TROOPERS KILL FARRELL MAN.

State Police Shoot Striker Believed to be Sniping Steel Plant.

FARRELL, Penn., Sept. 25.—Determination of the local authorities to stop the practice of shooting at the mills in this place resulted today in the killing of a man suspected of being one of the snipers by a member of the State Police on duty here. The man was Nick Grogan, or Grata. He was employed in the Sharon Steel Plant until the steel strike began. His brother, Lan, was injured by a bullet and another man was badly battered by a State policeman for resisting arrest.

Sniping at the American Steel and Wire plant has been indulged in ever since the strike started. It continued in the forenoon today, and employes of the company and State policemen located the firing by means of a surveyor's transit.

A squad of four crack shots among the State troopers advanced toward the house and arrested a man who came running from the place. He resisted and was beaten into submission, it is alleged. While being led away, it is said, some one in the house fired upon the troopers. Reports differ as to what then occurred. One version had it that Grata came out with one hand behind him as if about to draw a pistol. Another was that he was shot while watching the troopers from around a corner of the house. Several shots were fired, one killing him and another hitting his brother.

The shooting created much excitement in the borough, but it soon subsided when State troopers prevented the gathering of crowds.

This afternoon strikers held a meeting over the Ohio State line about three miles from Farrell. Mass meetings are forbidden in Farrell. There was a meeting of 800 employes of the Sharon Steel Hoop Company in Sharon, where meetings are permitted, at which Burgess Morgan of Sharon spoke and advised the unskilled workers to return to work so that the skilled men could resume. Union organizers advised the men against violence.

YOUNGSTOWN WORKERS VOTE TODAY ON STRIKE

Posters Announce Ballot, but Unions and Manufacturers Deny Having Part in It.

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, Sept. 25.—Meetings tomorriw have been called by the skilled and semi-skilled employes of practically all the large steel mils of the Mahoning Valley to vote on the question of returning to work.

The manufacturers say they have not called the meetings and that they evidently have been arranged by some of their employes. At strike headquarters it was declared the unions are not responsible for the meetings and that they will be picketed to prevent men from attending.

Posters announcing the meetings have appeared in various parts of the city.

Charges that the Pennsylvania State Constabulary was responsible for the riots at New Castle and Farrell were made in a telegram sent today to John Fitzpatrick, chairman of the steel strike committee, who is to appear before the Senate committee investigating the steel strike, by S. T. Hammersmark, secretary in charge of strike headquarters in the Youngstown district. The telegram follows:

The same speakers and organizers who addressed all meetings of the same class of people in peaceful Youngstown were used in outrages New Castle and Farrell. Constabulary absolutely responsible for murders and reign of terror in polluted Pennsylvania.

The fact that there has been no disorder of any kind in the Youngstown district, Hammersmark says, is because of the attitude of the State and local officials toward labor.

At strike headquarters this morning a copy of an agreement signed last night between the Niles Forge and Manufacturing Company, a fabricating company of Niles, and its bridge, structural iron workers, machinists, and blacksmiths was made public. The agreement recognizes the union, provides for an eight-hour day, with four hours on Saturday, time and a half for overtime, double time for Sundays and holidays, and nine hours' pay for eight hours' work.

This was declared to be a "model" agreement. The same form of agreement will be submitted to other fabricating companies in the Youngstown district.

Replying to a statement of Governor Sproul of Pennsylvania, contained in a telegram last night to William Z. Foster, director of the strike in the Pittsburgh district, to the effect that reports had reached the Pennsylvania Chief Executive that efforts were being made to bring armed mobs into Pennsylvania from other States to overpower local authority, Secretary Hammersmark said:

"The only rioting that has occurred has been caused in places where the State constabularly is located and by them. The same organizers, the same speakers as are used in Ohio are used in Pennsylvania. They talk to the same class of people. There is no trouble in Youngstown, while there is in cities like New Castle and Farrell. It proves conclusively that it is the fault of those Cossacks. Maybe an armed invasion of Pennsylvania would do good. In fact, we stand in the same position to that State that the United States did to Cuba before the Spanish-American war. We may have to clean them out."

The Youngstown Central Labor Council at a meeting this morning voted to stand solidly behind the steel strike.

The police have forbidden the manufacture as well as the sale of near-beer, closing down two breweries employing, it is said, 500 men. Proprietors of near-beer saloons had protested against the closing order issued to them while soda fountains could continue sales.

NEW CASTLE, Penn., Sept. 25.—In reply to the statement of S. T. Hammersmark, organizer of the Youngstown district, that State police were responsible for riots in New Castle, Mayor Newell of this city declared that the State police were not even in the city until after the riots had taken place.

OHIO TIED UP BY STRIKE.

Cleveland, Youngstown, and Steubenville Idle—Loraine Balks Union.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Sept. 25.—With the closing of the last mill in the iron and steel industry here today, leaders of the striking steel workers settled down to a long quiet wait.

"No change—we are not making plans to reopen," officials of the big plants said today. An attempt was made to operate the bar mill of the Empire Rolling Mill Company, but the men failed to report. Four hundred men were employed at the plant, all member of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, with which the company had an agreement.

Lorain, however, still baffles the union men in the Cleveland district. The National Tube Company was operating as usual today. Strike leaders, it is said, went there tonight with the purpose of persuading the workers at the plant to join the strikers.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 25.—A report on the steel strike situation in Cleveland, with a possible suggestion for solution at least in independent plants, will be presented to the United States Department of Labor, probably tomorrow, by John B. Lennon, Federal conciliator. He has been studying the strike situation here since Monday and will return to Washington tonight.

His report probably will be called to the attention of the Senate Committee investigating the steel strike, it was understood. Lennon would not discuss the nature of the report.

WARREN, Ohio, Sept. 25.—Members of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, at a special meeting today voted to call an immediate strike at the Trumbull Steel Company and Liberty Steel Company plants here. Both plants were forced to close down Tuesday evening because of a shortage of laborers.

BETHLEHEM WORKERS STRIKE ON MONDAY

General Committee Acts Immediately on Getting President Grace's Refusal to Confer.

Special to The New York Times.

BETHLEHEM, Penn., Sept. 25.—Following the refusal of President Grace of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation to grant the conference requested by the American Federation of Labor Committee for Organizing Iron and Steel Workers, the general committee of the labor organization in the Bethlehem plant of the corporation tonight voted unanimously to strike at 6 o'clock Monday morning.

David Williams, general organizer for machinists, who is in charge of the strike movement here, received word over the telephone tonight from William Z. Foster, Secretary of the National Commission, that the reply of President Grace was unsatisfactory. He received no detailed information as to what the reply contained, but a meeting of the General Organization Committee of the Bethlehem plant was called and the strike ordered.

Mr. Williams said that the reply of Mr. Grace was being considered by the National Committee at a meeting in Pittsburgh this evening. For several hours Mr. Williams tried to get in telephonic communication with Mr. Foster without success.

MORE PLANTS OPEN IN CHICAGO FIELD

unionized. This concern has the eight-hour day; it has a bonus; it has a council of workers for the hearing of grievances and for consultation upon wages, hours and conditions of employment. It has also gone in for what is known as "welfare work," in the shape of a clubhouse for workers and other things, but the men walked out when the strike started in such numbers that the plant shut down. Nothing in Indiana Harbor appeared to be working today despite some reports that 30 per cent. of the employes were back on the job.

In the last two or three days groups of the strikers, particularly the Croats, Greeks, Poles, and Serbs, are said to have shown strong desires to get back to work.

There was a conference today between Mayor McCormick of Indiana Harbor and Sheriff Lewis Barnes, and as a result several deputy sheriffs made their appearance on the streets. Peaceful picketing is not to be interfered with, but in case the men return to work the citizens plan to give them any protection necessary.

Foreigners Leaving for Europe.

Many of the workers are reported to be selling Liberty bonds and converting their possessions into one lump sum preparatory to going back to Europe.

"Every day at least forty or fifty leave this town and Hammond," said a leading real estate dealer. "They are going back to the old country, to Croatia and Rumania and other lands. You can talk to almost any one along the street outside the strident unionists and you get one stock remark, 'Strike no good.'"

During the afternoon the first open air meeting of strikers was held in South Chicago. It was largely attended. Leo M. Rogan and Theodore Vind of the South Chicago Trades and Labor Unions made addresses. They urged the men to stand fast and not to listen to reports that the strike was being broken.

"The public press is apparently against us," said Vind. "We will take pictures of all these chimneys here that are not smoking. They will show that the mills are not running."

One development at Gary was the posting of a notice by A. D. Osborn, Secretary of Local No. 703 of the International Union of Steam and Operating Engineers, announcing that the American Federation of Labor through the general committee representing twenty-four unions co-operating in the strike, had given official sanction to a strike of engineers. Members were notified to report tomorrow morning at headquarters to register. International offivers of the Engineers' Union had refused to order their men on strike.

In Waukegan, Chris Anderson, a night watchman in the employ of the American Steel and Wire Company, was set upon by five men and severely beaten as he was leaving the plant. The company, which employs 1,800 men, is making no real effort to operate, but has a small force on duty making repairs. Today the officials notified the striking employes that unless they return within a few days the plant would be closed down for three months.

CORPORATION REOPENS ITS RAIL MILL AT GARY

Union Leaders Charge Strike-Breakers Are Being Taken in Plants with Big Promises.

Special to The New York Times.

GARY, Ind., Sept. 25.—The strike situation in the Calumet region is tense, and it became known today that Gary's "Anti-Red Troops," a company of the State militia, are ready at three hours' notice to patrol Indiana Harbor or any other portion of the Chicago steel district. The company was organized during the war to put down alien enemy or Bolshevist uprisings. It was given machine guns, riot bayonets, blankets and cots by General Leonard Wood. When called out a few weeks ago to quell the riots at the Standard Steel Car Plant in Hammond, Ind., it responded promptly.

Importation of strike-breakers, charged by unionists; threats against workers loyal to the Steel Corporation, and reports from Indiana Harbor that citizens are asking for militia because of the disturbances two days ago are the developments talked of on the streets tonight.

While it is apparent that the strike leaders are endeavoring to conduct a peaceable strike, there are a number of known radicals in the ranks.

Shortly after the union leaders at East Side Park urged a crowd of several hundred strikers to be peaceful, a man ran into the City Hall and told this story:

"I am John F. Barnack. I work as a roller in the American Sheet and Tinplate Company's plant. My wife, three children, and small sister live with me at 1,349 Madison Street. I didn't join the union, or quit my job Monday, and I was warned that unless I did, something would happen to me. I was told they were coming to my house to get me last night. As soon as it was dark I took my wife and children across the street, and we hid in the grounds of the public school. About half-past 9 o'clock fifty or sixty men surrounded my house. My sister, Rose, was next door, and she says she heard the leader tell the men:

"'He's not here; we'll get together tomorrow night and drag him down to the union, and make him join or kill him. We've got to stop the men going back to work in the plant.'

"I am afraid my family will be killed. My God, what can I do; must we sleep in the park tonight?"

As a result Barnack's house was heavily guarded tonight.

Labor headquarters were stirred today by reports of pickets that strike-breakers were being taken into the big steel mills in buses with women sitting among the men to protect them.

The strike-breakers, it was declared, are secured from among the strikers at Homestead and other steel cities, where agents of the Corporation, it is said, offered double pay, free transportation, and food and lodging within the plant. This would bear out the claim that the Corporation is concentrating on Gary, where it began today the first operation of any of its plants since the walkout.

A trainload of strike-breakers was brought into the Buffington plant yesterday, it was declared, and women are taking the places of men there. This might explain how the steel corporation was able to place in operation on a limited scale the rail mill at 4 o'clock this morning. Open hearths Nos. 1 and 2 were operated last night, and the big Bessemer was blown. The Bessemer was shut down after several attempts.

The fifth battery of coke ovens was placed in operation today. Four blast furnaces continue to operate. The slab mill is being worked by a small crew. On the other hand 140 switchmen were laid off by the Elgin, Joliet & Eastern, the steel company's railroad, and seventy-five others given vacation. The fact that the plant has not produced steel since Saturday is responsible, it was said. There is very little to be hauled away. A score more of engineers and firemen will be laid off unless they care to work in other capacities in the mill, it was reported.

The steamer Coralia came into the Gary harbor this forenoon with 7,000 tons of ore. But there was no one to unload it, and the steamer left for Lorain, Ohio, but not before a marine fireman had quit in sympathey with the strikers.

The fatalities at the Buffington grade crossing a day ago and in the street car crash today have excited the foreign settlements. Women crowded about the Gary hospitals today and some blamed the mills. The Gary Interurban Traction Company, which operates the street car lines, and has only been out of bankruptcy two years, was recently reorganized, and has been pleading loss of revenue in demanding a fare increase, so that many of the people fear they cannot collect damages.

quesne, McKeesport, and Braddock, have increased their output, and are running approximately normal, with the exception of the Homestead plant, which is said to be running at more than 75 per cent. of its capacity.

In the vicinity of these vital units the Pennsylvania State constabulary continued to keep order with an iron hand, never allowing the strikers to congregate on the streets and ordering all persons to move on, so that the efforts of the strike organizers to start a new offensive against the great citadels of the Steel Corporation was completely blocked.

At Youngstown and other places where the troopers have not been concentrated in such numbers the strikers have adopted new tactics and are beginning to picket in automobiles and terrorize the men who remain at work by descending on them unexpectedly in machines.

While the big plants of the Carnegie Steel Company have held the strikers at a deadlock, the Jones & Laughlin Steel Company, the largest independent company in the United States, has been little affected. The company's official bulletin follows:

"We are no worse off today that we used to be the day after a Polish wedding."

Organizer Foster admits that little progress has been made in the attack on the works of this company, but he asserts that men are being drawn away in larger number every day. It is said that a big Polish wedding had sometimes reduced the working force of the Jones & Laughlin plant by two or three hundred men.

Organizer Foster said today that he had not yet been summoned to Washington, but that he was ready to go whenever called upon.

A committee which was named at yesterday's meeting of the organizers of the strike called on Sheriff Haddock of Allegheny County today and asked him to call off his deputy sheriffs, insisting that they were acting illegally in denying the right to hold public meetings and arresting them for congregating in small groups. Sheriff Haddock said that he would instruct his men to continue to do their work just as they had been doing it.

Several shots were fired from a hillside in Clairton about 6 o'clock this morning while Chief of Police Fred Young and three employes of the Clairton Steel Company were taking $300,000 to the plant to pay the men. At the time it was still dark and no persons could be seen. Young accompanied the messengers to the plant and later searched the hillside, but without results.

Conflicting statements were made today concerning the situation at the Clairton plant. Strike leaders said it was barely able to operate, while company officials reported more men in nearly all departments. It was said the coke plant yesterday turned out nearly as much coke as normal.

William J. Flynn, chief of the Federal Secret Service, arrived here today to investigate the steel strike.

Announcement of Mr. Flynn's presence in the city was made by United States Attorney E. Lowry Homes, who said he would confer with the investigator this afternoon. Along what lines Mr. Flynn will proceed was not disclosed.

An interesting story, which came through the channels of the United States Steel Corporation today and which was evidently suppressed yesterday, was the raid by the State Constabulary yesterday at Sharon, when three city blocks were completely cleaned up of alleged I. W. W.'s and Bolsheviki and enough ammunition to stock a small arsenal confiscated. There were seventy-five arrests altogether, it is said, and six men killed, chiefly snipers on the housetops who were trying to pick off the troopers on the street.

Threatened with death unless they leave their places of employment at the Carrie furnaces of the Carnegie Steel Company, at Braddock, many foreign employes have received manacing letters since the steel strike went into effect last Monday morning.

The steel officials have persuaded several of their employes to turn the letters over to them, and the Federal authorities will be notified.

Laborer Is Threatened.

One letter, postmarked Braddock, Sept. 23, was received by Frank Grasan, 142 Fourth Street, Rankin, a Croatian, employed at the Carrie furnaces. The letter follows:

Sept. 22, 1919.

We hereby notify you, Frank Grasan. We are writing to you that we saw you going to work to the Carrie furnaces on the above day. You will not go to work any more, as I will go before your door tomorrow morning. I will give you one shot, and if one is not enough I will give you three more.

You have no right to go to work, you are a black sheep. Do not think that you will live very long. I am sorry for your wife and children.

You and Mayo Benkovic will find something before the door, and those other scabs, too. We will leave it to God, and who is working as a scab will suffer in the grave in Belovar.

L. A. F. P. K. 10, 224.
12,130 N. A. 10000000000.

Grasan and Benkovic are employed at the Carrie furnace and "Belovar," mentioned in the letter is where they came from in Europe.

The letter, written in the Croatian language, was translated and given to a Braddock newspaper man. Officials of the Carnegie Steel Company at Braddock procured several other letters, which are said to be more violent than the one quoted.

In numerous cases the loyal workmen of Braddock, Rankin, Duquesne and other towns in the Monongahela Valley have received letters saying their children's ears will be cut, their wives will be murdered, and their homes burned.

Many of the foreigners have been frightened in this manner and, as a result, failed to report to their places of employment.

The letters are written in both pen and pencil and in foreign languages. In many instances the penmanship of one letter corresponds with that of others.

Many heads of departments in mills today said some of the workmen who have come back have suddenly awakened to the fact they have been on a "workless spree." Organizers, it was said, had told the foreigners they would own the mills and have the things in stores, which, it is said, explains why so many merchants in the Monongahela Valley towns took out riot insurance.

W. Z. FOSTER ASSERTS HE IS AN AMERICAN

Says He Was Born at Taunton, Mass.—Has Been Active in Radical Circles Since 1910.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 25.—In connection with reports that he was an alien, W. Z. Foster, leader of the steel strikers, at first said, with a laugh:

"I was born in Russia."

Then he went on to say that he was born at Taunton, Mass., thirty-eight years ago.

According to his own statement he had just three years of schooling in his life, and started out to make his own living at the age of 11 years.

He said he was employed for a couple of years by a mechanic and inventor at Philadelphia, and then started on a roving career, in which he worked at nearly every trade and calling.

He got his American Federation of Labor card as a car repairer.

The following account of Foster's activities prior to the strike, based on material which was turned over to the Department of Justice, was made public here today:

"The first appearance of W. Z. Foster as a radical was in 1910, as a reporter for the Seattle Call, a Socialist paper at that time. From this he appears to have developed into a soap box orator and general agitator, and from this he got into the I. W. W. He was the first to preach sabotage.

"In 1911, while a member of the I. W. W., Foster went to Europe and visited France, Germany, and Hungary as official correspondent of Solidarity, official organ of the I. W. W. in America, which at that time was published at Newcastle, Penn. He wrote many articles for this publication, some of them signed 'Yours for the I. W. W., W. Z. Foster;' and others, 'Yours for the Revolution, W. Z. Foster.'

"While in France he was associated with French syndicalists and in articles in Solidarity he laid stress on getting into the A. F. of L. and 'boring from within.' That it was folly to try to organize from the outside was his repeated admonition.

"While in Europe, Foster learned there was going to be a conference of international trades unions at ... pest. He cabled to Vincent St. John in America, at that time head of the I. W. W., asking for credentials as a delegate to the conference. This conference was officially called the International Secretarial. James Duncan, who was, and still is, First Vice President of the American Federation of Labor, was present as a delegate from that organization, and opposed the seating of Foster and succeeded in having him excluded as a delegate and the I. W. W. as the representative body of American labor.

"After Foster returned to America, he, with a few others, founded 'The Syndicalist League of North America,' of which he became Secretary, and it was then he wrote the book 'Syndicalism.' Having learned sabotage in France, he went throughout the States preaching it, and when he adv quiet and no disturbances have occurred. Most of the strikers were out on the streets to see the President, and there were no hostile demonstrations.

WILSON SAYS CHANGE REJECTS THE TREATY

The President did not mention the steel strike, but explained what he hoped to accomplish for labor under the labor sections of the peace treaty.

All contentions against the League covenant except Article X. had been blown away like bubbles, the President stated, and he then went on to explain the article.

"Whether we use it wisely or unwisely," he said, "we can use the vote of the United States in the Council of the League of Nations to prevent the United States being drawn into any conflict abroad."

The council, he asserted, only had power to advise, and any advice given must have the approval of the member representing the United States.

"The framers of the Peace Treaty and League covenant in Paris, he went on, were architects who built upon the principles expressed in the "fourteen points."

The President again quoted from the article by Theodore Roosevelt in THE NEW YORK TIMES. After reading the first paragraph the President said:

"Now there's Article X."

Speaking of the opposition Senators, he said that they "have not a leg to stand on" in their contention that the rights of the United States were not safeguarded in the covenant.

In summing up his position the President said that there could be no middle course and that he would not claim any special privilege for the United States in the League.

In his address at Denver this morning, when he spoke before an audience of 15,000 persons who packed the Auditorium, Mr. Wilson asked that the Senate opposition in whatever action it might take make known its position beyond reasonable doubt so that there might be no confusion in the minds of the people as to just where the League opponents stood.

It was his duty as Chief Executive, the President said, to make the decision as to what the final action by the Senate meant, and he added that he should not hesitate to do so, confident that the masses of the people would be behind him and make known their resentment in unmistakable form. The situation in the Senate, the President said, left the issue clean cut and distinct.

As the great throng cheered him and raised shouts of "Don't worry about the Senate," and "Stay with the people," the President made this declaration:

"I challenge the opponents of this treaty to show cause why it should not be ratified. I challenge them to show cause why there should be any hesitation in ratifying it. I do not understand delays. I do not understand covert processes of opposition.

"It is time that we knew where we shall stand, for observe, my fellow citizens, the negotiation of treaties rests with the Executive of the United States. When the Senate has acted, it will be for me to determine whether its action constitutes an adoption or a rejection, and I beg the gentlemen who are responsible for the action of the United States Senate to make it perfectly clear whether it is an adoption or a rejection.

"I do not wish to draw doubtful conclusions. I do not wish to do injustice to the process of an honest mind. But when that treaty is acted upon I must know whether it means that we have ratified it or rejected it, and I feel confident that I am speaking for the people of the United States."

Not a Personal or Party Issue.

The open challenge stirred the President's hearers to enthusiastic applause and he continued the defiant note of his address.

"When it is around election time," he said, "a man ought not to be doubtful of what the meaning of his intercourse with his fellow-citizens is, because it is easy for applause to go to the head, it is easy for individual support to be given a wider implication than can properly be given to them. But I thank God that on this occasion the whole issue has nothing to do with me. I did not carry any purpose of my own to Paris. I did not carry any purpose that I did not know from the action of public opinion in the United States was the purpose of the United States.

"It was not the purpose of a party. It was not the purpose of any section of our fellow-citizens. It was a purpose subscribed to by the American public opinion and formally adopted by the Governments with which we had to deal on the other side, and I came back with a document embodying the principles insisted upon at the outset and carried by the American delegation at Paris.

"Therefore, I think that I have the right to say that I have the support of the people of the United States. The issue is so big that it transcends all party and personal things."

During his speech the President elaborated somewhat on the idea that nothing in the covenant would tie the hands of the United States unless Congress concurred.

"No active policy," he said, "can be undertaken by the League without the assenting vote of the United States. I cannot understand the anxiety of some gentlemen for fear something is going to be put over on them. I cannot understand why, having read the covenant of the League and examined its constitution, they are not satisfied with the fact that every active policy of the League must be concurred in by a unanimous vote of the Council, which means that the affirmative vote of the United States is in every instance necessary, and that being the case it becomes sheer nonsense, my fellow-citizens, to talk about a super-government being set up over the United States, becomes sheer nonsense to say that any authority is constituted which can order our armies to other parts of the world, which can interfere with our domestic questions, which can direct our international policy even, in any matter in which we do not consent to be directed.

"We would be under our own direction just as much under the covenant of the League of Nations as we are now. Of course, I do not mean to say that we do not, so to say, pool our moral issues. We do that. In acquiescing in the covenant of the League we do adopt, and we should adopt, certain fundamental moral principles of right and justice, which, I dare say, we do not need to promise to live up to, but which we are certainly proud to promise to live up to. We are not turning any corner. We always have lived up to them, and we do not intend to change our course of action or our standards of action. And it is American standards of action that are set up in the covenant of the League of Nations."

Assails the Hyphenates.

There was a defiant note, too, in the President's reiteration to the charge that hyphenated citizens were again operating to defeat the treaty.

"Out of doors, that is to say outside of legislative halls," he said, "there is no organized opposition to this treaty except among the people who tried to defeat the purpose of this Government in the war.

"Hyphens are the knives that are being stuck into this document, and the issue is clearly drawn. Because inasmuch as we are masters of our own participation in the action of the League of Nations, why do we need reservations? If we cannot be obliged to do anything that we do not ourselves vote to do, why qualify our acceptance of a perfectly safe agreement?

"There can be only one object, my fellow-citizens, and that is to give the United States a standing of exceptional advantage in the League, to exempt it from obligations which the other members assume, or to put a special interpretation upon the duties of the United States under the covenant, which interpretation is not applied to the duties of other members of the league under the covenant, and I for my part say that it is unworthy of the United States to ask any special privilege of that kind."

Dealing with the attitude of the mild reservationists who would interpret some phases of the treaty without direct amendments or reservations that amounted to amendments, the President said that he had no special objections to this, but he thought such a course unnecessary and futile. He summed this matter up as follows:

"We therefore have come to the straight-cut line, adopting or rejecting. Qualified adoption is not adoption. It is perfectly legitimate, I admit, to say in what sense we understand certain articles. They are all perfectly obvious in meaning so far as I can see, but if you want to make the obvious more obvious, I do not see any objection to that; if by the multiplication of words you can make the simple words speak their meaning more distinctly I think that that is an interesting rhetorical exercise but nothing more.

"But qualifications that mean asking special exemptions and privileges for the United States—we cannot ask that. We must either go in or stay out."

The President spoke of himself as being "under bonds" to the soldiers who fought in Europe and to their mothers and fathers and sweethearts in this country to see that there should be no other world war.

"So I dare not," he declared, "turn away from the straight path I have set myself to redeem this promise that I have made."

Denver's Cordial Greeting.

Denver made a holiday of the President's visit. His train arrived at 10:30 o'clock last night and the streets were thronged by people who had waited long to greet him. The President spent the night at a hotel, and this morning he was taken on an automobile parade through streets filled with men, women and children, to the Auditorium. The meeting began at 9:30 o'clock and at that hour every seat was occupied and many hundreds crowded in the rear of the hall and in the aisles. S. Harrison White, Chairman of the Colorado Branch of the League to Enforce Peace, presided, and on the platform with the President and Mrs. Wilson were Governor Shoup, a Democrat, and many prominent men of both political parties.

Both Senators from this State, Phipps, Republican, and Thomas, Democrat, have withheld support from the President in his fight for ratification of the treaty as it stands and sentiment on the issue is divided. The opinion was expressed today by League advocates, however, that the President had gained ground in Colorado and that most of the people would like to see the treaty ratified.

The President accepted the cordiality of the greeting extended to him in Denver as evidence that he had the people with him. He was further heartened by the great crowds that turned out at Colorado Springs and other points between Denver and Pueblo to cheer him.

At Colorado Springs the crowd was massed about the station and many, in their desire to see the President and Mrs. Wilson, climbed to the roofs of freight cars and the railroad station.

The Reservation He Will Reject.

PUEBLO, Col., Sept. 25, (Associated Press.)—White House officials in the Presidential party permitted it to become known that the proposed reservation which the President quoted at Salt Lake City and Cheyenne and which he announced he would regard as a rejection of the treaty was one he had been informed was agreed on by several Republican Senate leaders.

ASSAILS HYPHENATES AS FOES OF TREATY

Wilson Declares Those Who Tried to Defeat Our Purposes in War Now Oppose Agreement.

DENVER, Sept. 25.—In his address here this morning the President said in part:

I always feel a thrill of pride standing before a great company of my fellow-citizens to speak of this great document which we shall always know as the Treaty of Versailles. I am proud to speak of it because for the first time in the history of international consultation men have turned away from the ambitions of government and sought to advance the fortunes of peoples. I say without hesitation that this is a great document of liberation. * * * The centre and heart of the document is that great instrument which is placed at the beginning of it, the covenant of the League of Nations.

I think everybody now understands that you cannot work this treaty without that covenant. * * * But you will notice that with this single exception of the provision in regard to the transfer from the German Empire of the Shantung Province to Japan, practically nothing in the body of the treaty has seemed to constitute any great obstacle to its adoption. All the controversies, all the talk, has centred on the League of Nations, and I am glad to see the issues centred.

I want to call to your attention and to point out what is not often enough explained to audiences in this country—the actual constitution of the League of Nations. It consists of two bodies, a Council and an Assembly. The Assembly is the numerous body. In it every self-governing State that has a vote in the League is represented, and not only the self-governing independent States, but the self-governing colonies and the dominions, such as Canada, New Zealand, Australia, and South Africa; they are all represented in the Assembly, and it is in the Assembly that the combined representation of the several members of the British Empire are assigned six votes, and you are constantly being told that Great Britain has six votes and we have one. I want you to appreciate the full significance of that; they have six votes in the Assembly and the Assembly does not vote. So that bubble is exploded.

There are several matters in which the vote of the Assembly must co-operate with the vote of the Council, but in every such case a unanimous vote of the Council is necessary. Inasmuch as the United States is a permanent member of the Council, her vote is necessary to every active policy of the League, and therefore the single vote of the United States always counts six, so far as the votes of the British Empire are concerned.

Out of doors, that is to say, out of the legislative halls, there is no organized opposition to this treaty except among the people who tried to defeat the purposes of this Government in the war. The hyphen is the knife that is being stuck into this document. The issue is clearly drawn because, inasmuch as we are masters of our own participation in the action of the League of Nations, why do we need reservations? * * *

If we do not have this treaty of peace, labor will continue to be what it ought not to be, a human function and a purchasable commodity throughout the world. There is incorporated in the articles of this great treaty a magna charta for labor. There is set up a means of periodical examination of the conditions of labor all over the world, protecting the labor of women and children that have not the physical endurance to bear the burden put on them, and it is the duty of the nations of the world to study the methods of labor and raise the scale of human labor. You know what that means.

We have not done our full duty in regard to the amelioration of the conditions of labor in America, but the conditions here are better than anywhere else, and we now have an opportunity to exercise our full influence to raise the standard everywhere to the levels we have tried to raise in this country, and also as between those who employ labor and those who labor. The heart of the world has never got into this business, the conscience has never been released along these lines in regard to the improvement of labor, and more than that, unless we find some method such as I have been alluding to, we will not have released the real energy of labor.

Men are not going to work and produce what they would produce if they feel that they are not justly treated, and if you want to realize the real wealth of this country then bring about the human relationship between employers and employés which will make them co-laborers and partners and fellow-workers. All of that is open to us under and through the instrumentality of the League of Nations and under this great treaty, and still we debate whether we should ratify it or not.

It had been one of the purposes of the war, Mr. Wilson continued, to set up a permanent peace guarantee. He declared that he was "under bond," especially to the children of the country, to make good the promise of such a guarantee. He added that the next world war would be much more terrible than the last, saying, "I'm for any kind of insurance against a barbaric reversal of civilization."

Should the United States stay out of the League, continued the President, it would have to have "the biggest army in the world," and there would have to be conscription and heavy taxation.

A "wholesome moral clearing house" was the way the President characterized the covenant provision under which disturbing questions could be brought up for discussion by the League. That provision, he said, would make such questions "everybody's business," while hitherto international law had meant "minding your own business, particularly when something outrageous is up."

SUGGESTS CANADA MIGHT VOTE WITH US

President Calls Article X. "Heart of the Covenant" and Represents America's Views.

PUEBLO, Sept. 25.—Reducing his fight for the Peace Treaty to a direct issue of acceptance or rejection, President Wilson today invited the Senate to take an unmistakable stand one way or the other.

President Wilson arrived here on his special train at 3 P. M. and was taken, with his party, for a drive through the State Fair Grounds. He then went to the Memorial Auditorium, where he spoke to a large and enthusiastic audience.

In his address the President said the chief pleasure of his country-wide trip was that it had nothing to do with his personal fortunes. He repeated his charge that an "organized propaganda" was opposing the treaty and that it proceeded from "hyphens."

"Any man who carries a hyphen about him," he said, "carries a dagger which he is ready to plunge into the vitals of the Republic. If I can catch a man with a hyphen in this great contest, I will know that I have caught an enemy of the Republic."

Reviewing the treaty provisions, the President stressed the labor features, asserting that if the treaty failed there would be no great international tribunal before which labor could bring its requests for better conditions.

"What we want to do with the great labor questions," he said, "is to lift them into the light."

Going on to the League covenant, he declared that this agreement was necessary for carrying out the peace terms. For the same reason, he asserted, the covenant would be incorporated in the treaties with Austria, Hungary, Bulgaria, and Turkey, now under negotiation at Versailles.

On the question of voting power the President said:

Now you have heard of six votes belonging to Great Britain. Those six votes are not in the council, they are in the assembly, and the interesting thing is that the assembly does not vote. I must modify that statement a little but essentially it is absolutely true. In every matter in which the assembly is given a vote (and there are only four or five,) its vote does not count unless concurred in by the representatives of all the nations represented on the council, so there is no validity to the vote of the assembly unless approved by the United States, so the vote of the United States is as big as the six votes of the British Empire. I think that is a perfectly safe situation.

Do you think it unjust that there should be some opportunity of debate given to that little country in the south, New Zealand? Do you think it unjust that Australia should be allowed to take part in the debate? Do you think it unjust that that little nation in the south of Africa should be represented? Those two men who represented South Africa at Paris were two distinguished generals of the Boer Army and they were two of the most intelligent men I have ever met, men who could talk with the best of statesmen.

What about Canada? Is not Canada a good neighbor? Is not Canada more likely to agree with the United States than Great Britain? Canada has a speaking power, and then for the first time in the history of the world that great country, India, is given a voice among the nations of the world. And I want to say that some of the wisest figures at the conference in Paris came from India.

When you hear an opinion, you do not count the number of people who hold it; you ask who said it. You weigh opinions, you do not count them, and the beauty of all democracy is that every voice can be heard, every voice can have the privilege of contributing to the final judgment. That is the object of it.

Mr. Wilson was applauded when he said the United States was "too proud to ask for reservations which would relieve it of some of the responsibilities other nations assume under the League."

It was the "dearest wish" of Germany he said, that the United States should stay out of the League, because that would mean the alienation of this country from the other recent enemies of German autocracy.

go at once to San Francisco, where, according to word here tonight, plans have already been started for a rousing ovation to him. After speaking at San Francisco, Mr. Johnson will proceed to Los Angeles, speaking on the way. He expects to make speeches on his return to Washington in cities where President Wilson has appeared.

"I am assured that my amendment will be protected during my absence," said Mr. Johnson tonight. "It will be the last one to be voted upon, I am informed. If it is regarded as necessary to move it, I am assured that I will have four days' notice so that I can return to the Capitol in time to participate in the debate.

"I am not sorry, now, that I broke my trip and came back here. I was all at sea as to my amendment before. Now I know where it stands."

Senator Johnson would make no prediction as to the outcome of the vote on his amendment, when reached. He had no idea, he said, how far the "mild reservationists" would get in their effort at compromise on a reservation.

"As I have said, there will be a vote on my amendment, no matter how many Senators may want to substitute a reservation for it," he said. "I will not abandon it."

Leaders among the reservationists would attempt no prophecy as to the likelihood of the proposed reservation on vote equality in the league assembly being accepted. It was stated that, while the majority of middle ground Senators favored a reservation, rather than the amendment, some of them, in the end, might turn to the amendment, if they found that the reservationists' program could not prevail.

Talk of Presidential Rivalry.

Although some of Senator Johnson's supporters in the Senate have been disposed to believe that organization leaders, concerned over the spirited demonstrations which he received while on his trip in the middle West, were responsible for getting him back at the capital, fearing that he might get too far with his presidential boom, Mr. Johnson has refrained from imputing this motive to them. While mystified over the anxiety of some of the leaders to have him abandon his trip and return to the Senate, he found the situation so badly mixed, on his return, that he was more inclined to consider the leaders' move as actuated by the desire to have him on the ground so as to help straighten out the tangle.

The assent of Mr. Lodge to the proposal to renew the trip was sufficient evidence to Mr. Johnson today that Mr. Lodge was entirely sincere in his insistence that he considered the situation early in the week one that demanded Mr. Johnson's presence.

The Fall amendment, to eliminate the United States from participating in the commission created under the treaty, except the reparations commission, will come up tomorrow under the agreement of last Monday and is expected to be under debate for at least a week. Vote upon it is expected to come together with the thirty-five others offered by Mr. Fall, all pertaining to the same feature, but affecting different commissions.

Debate on the treaty occupied more than three hours of the Senate's time today, Senators Lenroot and New speaking in favor of changes and Senator Smith, Democrat of Maryland, urging ratification without change.

Lenroot Replies to Wilson.

Senator Lenroot replied to the speech of President Wilson at Cheyenne yesterday in which the President insisted that Article X., as written in the treaty, must stand. Taking up the President's intimation that he would regard the adoption of the Foreign Relations Committee majority's reservation to Article X. as flat rejection of the treaty, Mr. Lenroot declared that rather than sacrifice the independence of the United States in deciding its own participation in wars he would vote to reject the treaty in its entirety.

Mr. Lenroot regarded a reservation on Article X., he said, as essential, although he did not indicate that he would vote for the one offered by the committee majority.

"The President quoted a reservation on Article X. that has never been offered," said Mr. Lenroot. "The one he quoted is entirely different from the committee reservation.

"Mr. Wilson says the treaty must be ratified without reservations. I say that reservations are necessary to protect the interests of the United States and I intend to vote for them.

"In one of his speeches Mr. Wilson told the people that the United States would be free, under the League of Nations covenant, to act according to its own dictates in any matter involving other nations. In another speech he said the United States must accept the responsibility imposed by the league and go to the relief of oppressed nations. He was wrong in one of the other of his statements.

"The President has misrepresented the facts to the people in one way or another."

New Denies Equality in League.

Senator New said in his speech that he would consider himself guilty of "treason" if he did not vote for the committee amendments and reservations.

"Even with the changes proposed the treaty would not be acceptable," he declared. "There would still be much to which I would not be reconciled."

Senator New quoted from President Wilson's statement in San Francisco that the British Empire could not outvote the United States in the League of Nations, because "in every matter except the admission of new members to the League no action can be taken without the concurrence of a unanimous vote of the representatives of the States which are members of the Council, so that in all matters of action the affirmative vote of the United States is necessary and equivalent to the united vote of the representatives of the several parts of the British Empire."

"Surely the President overlooks the fact that in those disputes in which America is concerned we have no vote at all," argued Mr. New. "He also overlooks the fact that under Article XV. if a dispute is referred to the Assembly there may be a report made public by a majority of the Assembly, in which majority Great Britain would have six votes to our one.

"And even more important is the President's failure to remember that under Article IV. the Assembly has the right to choose four members of the Council, and there appears to be no doubt that the Assembly may elect by a majority vote. When it comes to electing these four members of the Council Great Britain would start with six votes accredited to the home Government and the colonies, in addition to which she would control the votes of Persia and Hedjaz."

Smith Urges Action on Treaty.

Senator Smith told the Senate that he would not vote for any reservations unless he found them necessary to save the "gigantic constructive principles involved in the League of Nations." He preferred that the treaty be ratified without the slightest change, and would fight for that program.

Mr. Smith advocated prompt action upon the treaty, contending that no debate on it would change the attitude of any Senator, since each, long ago, had decided how to vote.

"And for my part I have never for an instant doubted the wisdom and duty of ratifying this treaty as submitted as promptly as possible, without amendments or reservations," said the Senator. "No one seriously contends that an amendment would not recommit this treaty to the Peace Conference, resulting in indefinite delay of peace. Even a reservation might have that effect.

"I shall vote for no reservations unless convinced of the absolute necessity of so doing in order to save from failure the gigantic constructive principle involved. The treaty with its League of Nations may be open to much well-taken criticism. The convincing argument in its favor is that as framed it is the best the world can get now."

Alluding to the committee amendments on the Shantung award to Japan, Senator Smith exclaimed:

"Why carp about Shantung, a matter of slight comparative importance, which we wish were otherwise? The League saves China from the wolves in larger ways. Where could China go, what could she do without a League of Nations?

"Why say we will be involuntarily drawn into war, when Congress as always, alone can declare war?"

"Such criticisms merely give point and emphasis to the relatively trivial features found objectionable in the treaty as contrasted with the heroic proportion of its message of promise to a war-weary world."

In a resolution offered today by Representative King, Republican, of Illinois, the House is called upon to approve the attitude of Senators who are opposed to the ratification of the treaty in its present form.

PREMIER AVERTING NATIONAL STIRKE

and the Government were under consideration for many hours today, both by the Cabinet in conference with the railway leaders, and separately by the Executive Committee of the National Union of Railway Men. When the conferences ended this evening a brief statement was issued by the Secretary of the Premier, saying:

"The whole situation has been fully and frankly discussed from the viewpoint of the National Union of Railway Men, and it was agreed to renew the discussion tomorrow."

Questioned tonight when leaving the Cabinet Council, Sir Eric Geddes, Minister of Transport, said no settlement of the difficulty had been reached. No further official statement was available, but, according to unofficial reports, there was very plain speaking at the conference, although the spirit of compromise appeared to prevail, and there was great hope that a settlement of the controversy would be reached tomorrow.

That the situation is still filled with dangerous possibilities, however, apparently is indicated by an official announcement that the Premier has canceled an engagement he had at Carnarvon Saturday owing to the crisis.

Representatives of the union yesterday presented a virtual ultimatum to the Government, demanding that a basis for the standardization of wages be settled. The Cabinet was in session yesterday afternoon for three hours and discussed the situation. An announcement after the meeting said the Government was willing to continue negotiations with the union, it being declared that a "misunderstanding" existed. Members of the union are now working under an agreement with the Government by which the men will continue to draw their wartime wages until Dec. 31. The sudden demand for an immediate settlement, therefore, came as a surprise yesterday, and there were hints that the union's action was of political significance.

Unlike several recent labor threats which were instigated by extremists against the advice of their leaders, yesterday's sensational demand by the railway men emanated from union chiefs, who acted after a deliberate conference. Thus greater gravity attaches to the threat, which has seriously stirred the public and which came as a surprise not only to the people generally, but to many railway centres, where, it is asserted, the workers are contented with their present position and stand to gain nothing by the strike. It is declared they are already receiving wages which the union would seek to make a standard throughout the country, and are willing to await negotiations to fix rates to be paid after Dec. 31. There is, however, no indication that a call for a strike would be repudiated anywhere, although there might be reluctant acquiescence in some cases.

Different rates are now being paid for the same class of work in different parts of the country, and the kernal of the dispute is whether the higher or lower rate shall eventually become the standard. The union maintains that when the temporary arrangement was made in March it was understood the final settlement would level the standard upward, and it contends the Government is now proposing a trend toward the lower level. It is believed in some quarters that this point constitutes the "misunderstanding" between the Government and the union and that the union interpreted as final an offer of the lower rate which the Government is said to have made. This feature of the situation is still obscure.

Consternation over the threatened strike is voiced by London morning newspapers, the majority of which are indignant at the haste with which the National Union of Railway Men launched its threat while there was yet three months for the temporary agreement to run. There is some criticism of the Government's handling of the situation, it being especially accused of "dawdling," but the bulk of opinion is sharply against the union, which is condemned for "playing with fire" and doing "everything possible to force concessions which the country is unable at this time to afford."

Be Sure You're Smart

Then go ahead—anywhere. If you really feel that there should be some sort of motto in the best regulated families, take this newest heading from Paris. Because, fortunately, one thing remains frivolously true, woman proposes and Paris disposes. And whether or not you'll be smart depends more or less upon just how strictly you live up to the ten thousand Parisian commandments.

The Very First Aid

to any autumn wardrobe is a suit or, literally, suits. Just made for every possible occasion, a suit can be your almost constant companion. Some of them go shopping; some, of a lighter turn of mind, prefer teas and matinees; some believe that sports are the only things worth being born for.

Via Paris Letters

Our Paris representatives, busily wandering through those bright and giddy salons, have hurried back some fluttering authentic notes on this subject nearest and dearest to a woman's wardrobe.

Versatility

That's the better nature of these garments always. Believing that variety is the spice of suits, Paris has wrinkled its temperamental brow and filled the world with a number of things. One house has decided upon the long Russian blouse as the distinctive style of its jackets, closing them down the side from the shoulder to the lower edge.

The Eternal East

has glittered down on this same house, where coats and dresses as well as suits prove that Persia and the Far East have inspired many of the astonishing and wonderful models designed to win lots of feminine hearts somewhere behind the Manhattan sky line.

Another Thing

we have learned is a bit of gossip about sapphire blue. There just had to be some, heaven knows. This radiant color has become socially prominent in elaborate suits and wraps of brocade combined with hide-and-seek lines of silver or copper. It is also used alone in chiffon velvet.

A Big Sigh

You just can't crowd all the hurry-me-across news into a single little column. Even the column grows breathless. But we know more—letters and letters more. Wait and see.

Better still, come and see.

OTHERS TO ARBITRATE

Pressmen, Feeders, and Paper Handlers Will Name Sub-Committee for Discussion of Differences.

The outstanding development yesterday in the commercial printing situation was the refusal of Typographical Union No. 6 to arbitrate the question of the forty-four-hour week. Leon Rouse, President of "Big 6," and representative of the pressmen's, feeders', and paper handlers' unions conferred with the Labor Committee of the Printers' League Section of the Association of Employing Printers in the Flatiron Building behind closed doors all the afternoon. At the close details of the discussion were made public by William Green, Chairman of the employers' committee.

Before the end of the meeting Mr. Rouse left without giving to the press any explanation of his action. The reason given by Mr. Green was that the President of "Big 6" was not in a position, after taking a stand against arbitrating the forty-four-hour-week question, to act as spokesman for the other labor leaders present, whose unions had arbitration clauses in their contract with the employers.

After each side reviewed the situation in the industry, according to Mr. Green, the labor delegates were asked if they were willing to submit the forty-four-hour-week question. With the exception of President Rouse, all answered in the affirmative, saying that they would be bound by the clauses in the contract providing for arbitration on all questions in dispute. The President of the "Big 6" said that his union would submit any question to arbitration except the one before them at that moment, according to the Chairman of the employers' committee. Rouse then left the meeting.

Committees to Meet.

"As far as Big Six is concerned the situation is the same as before," Mr. Green said. "Franklin Union No. 23 and New York Printing Pressmen's Union No. 51 were not represented, as the employers have declined to meet them because of their stand against the International Union."

Mr. Green said that the formal offer of the employers to arbitrate had been made at the meeting and that a subcommittee of the employers would be chosen to meet a sub-committee representing the unions to see if a settlement of the controversy could be reached. The pressmen, feeders, and paper handlers have demanded a forty-four-hour week, an increase of $14 a week in wages, and a general improvement in shop conditions.

Marsden G. Scott, President of the International Typographical Union, has sent to the members of the union a pamphlet entitled "Plain Facts About the New York Job Scale Controversy." After reviewing the history of the job scale controversy in New York and what he termed the fair offer of the employers to submit the dispute to arbitration.

Fears for Foreign Trade.

The foreign market of the American Publishers is seriously threatened by the attitude of the local labor unions, according to a statement issued yesterday by Frederic G. Melcher, Secretary of the American Booksellers' Association and editor of the Publishers Weekly. While New York has been the dominating centre of American book production, it has never figured to any extent in export trade, he said, because books could be manufactured more cheaply in Europe, but during and since the war American publishers have been invading this territory successfully and have made plans for extending their activities.

HEAR PRESIDENT THREATENS ITALY

ing out from Fiume southward and the occupation of the highlands would be necessary to resist any Serbian-Jugoslav action which might be undertaken.

The lines of d'Annunzio's expeditionary forces were made more secure today and more rigid regulations respecting entrance to and exit from the port and town are being enforced. All traffic along the roads surrounding Fiume is being closely scrutinized by the guards.

The Queen's Brigade, which at first was reported to have joined d'Annunzio's forces, still remains under the regular Italian command, occupying the town of Sussak.

Give Up Dalmatian Port.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 25, (Associated Press.)—American Marines landed from a torpedo boat destroyer to compel the Italians to evacuate Trau, (Trogir,) Dalmatia, according to a dispatch received here from Spalato, a short distance east of Trau.

The dispatch adds that the Italians left after the inhabitants fired on them and that Jugoslav troops took over the town from the Americans.

ROME, Sept. 25.—The detachment of Italian officers and soldiers which crossed the line of demarcation near Trau (Trogir) and penetrated the town after disarming a small Serbian outpost, has retired to the Italian area, according to the Messaggero's correspondent in Trieste. The Italians withdrew, it was added, on the advice of superior Italian officers.

The Crown Council held two sessions today to take up the situation that has arisen as a result of the seizure by Gabriele d'Annunzio of Fiume. If any decision was reached as to what the Government intends to do in the premises, no announcement was made.

The day session sat until luncheon time, and adjourned until 4 o'clock, when the other sitting continued until 7 o'clock this evening. Baron Sonnino, former Foreign Minister, and Signor Turrati, leader of the Intransigeant Socialists, were not present. In a letter to Premier Nitti, Signor Turrati explained that the traditions of the Socialist group precluded his attendance upon the Crown Council.

Persuasion, it is said here, is useless without agreeing to Captain d'Annunzio's conditions—the annexation of the port of Fiume and the hinterland to Italy proper. It is asserted that, if the Italian Government should accept such conditions, Italy would have against her not only her Allies, but her erstwhile enemies, headed by Jugoslavia, which, perhaps, would already have acted but for internal troubles and the lack of a responsible man in power.

The Italian Government was the first to recognize the impossibility of expecting the Allies to acknowledge as an accomplished fact the occupation of Fiume, for if they admitted this view there would be "accomplished facts" everywhere.

Cabinet Not to Resign.

The advisability of the Cabinet resigning has been examined, but the idea has been abandoned, since a Ministerial crisis would not help to solve the problem, nor is there a man available with greater authority or more energy than Premier Nitti, who is generally considered the strongest statesman possessed by Italy.

He has considerable opposition, however, which is fomented by Nationalists and supporters of Baron Sonnino, former Minister of Foreign Affairs. Besides, the present Chamber of Deputies may be said to be almost considered illegal and hardly representing the will of the people, since its term expired during the war, being prolonged to avoid general elections during the conflict. It is pointed out that this naturally weakens the significance of the support given the Cabinet.

Hope is entertained that the Crown Council will succeed in bringing about an agreement by all parties on a stable policy.

POET INCITES DALMATIANS.

Fiume Population Welcomes Mutineers with Open Arms.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Sept. 24.—D'Annunzio's proclamations are now no longer exclusively addressed to the populations of Fiume and Italy, but include Dalmatia. The effect is like adding fuel to an already roaring fire. The citizens of those coast towns ever since the poet's occupation of Fiume have looked toward him for their liberation, longing to see Italian volunteers come "to save them from the foreign yoke," as they put it.

Following is an extract from a message d'Annunzio sent to the Dalmatians:

"A sharp thorn pricks my trusting heart. It was with regret and owing to the fact that I had not sufficient forces that I was unable to spread the sacred fire as far as Spalato on that day of Fiume, and further still. The passion of Dalmatia never tormented me so much as during my march to Fiume. What will Zara say and do when it receives the news of the enterprise? What will Serenico, Trau, Spalato, and its other sister cities say? This anxiety never abandoned me even in the height of action. Mingled with the triumphal cries of Fiume I seemed to distinguish your distant, despairing voice.

"Brothers of Dalmatia, we have not forgotten you, we cannot forget you. The victorious army reorganizing itself around heroic Fiume becomes every day more numerous, more powerful, more disciplined. In me you see a servant of your cause, O brothers of Dalmatia. Confide in the fraternal victorious army."

So long as the trouble consisted in coping with the occupation of Fiume the question was pretty bad, but not hopeless. If, however, the Italian population of Dalmatia should rise, helped by d'Annunzio's volunteers, affairs would take quite a different aspect. The Jugoslavs would certainly not stand the occupation of what they consider territory belonging to them.

The newspapers favorable to Premier Nitti no longer hide the gravity of the situation and appeal to the country at large to keep calm, disciplined, and united, and to consider that any violent, thoughtless act may plunge the whole nation into another war. The opposition papers, on the other hand, minimize the danger and accuse Nitti of spreading these alarming reports to frighten the country, and especially the political parties into dropping all their differences and standing solidly together as at the time of Caporetto, and save Italy from disaster. This manoeuvre, according to the opposition, has for its only object to prevent the Cabinet from being overthrown.

The Giornale d'Italia calls for the annexation of Fiume to Italy. "It is said America would protest if Fiume were annexed," it says. "We believe otherwise, because all reports from the United States show that the greater part of public opinion is favorable to d'Annunzio's expedition. Never will that great democracy, which entered the European war for the highest moral reasons, stain herself with the calumnious intentions attributed to her of making Italy bend by threatening her with the spectre of hunger."

The population of Fiume welcomed with open arms the mutinous officers and soldiers. Whole families sleep in one room in order to offer accommodation to their "saviors." Women collect linen and shoes for them, while the movies admit them without payment, and the public baths give them the freedom of their establishments. The volunteers on their side are perfectly disciplined and taking every hardship with good humor and whatever happens as a joke.

Deputy Eugenio Chiesa, ex-High Commissioner of Aeronautics, succeeded in crossing the armistice zone during the night and walked six hours down rocky steep bypaths at the risk of being discovered and sent back by the police, as the passes are absolutely closed to every one, even the Deputies. Chiesa has been the only member of Parliament who has had the courage to go to Fiume personally to ascertain the feelings and will of the Irredentist town for the purpose of reporting his impressions to Parliament. A company of storm soldiers, delighted at his visit, gave a dinner in his honor, conferred on him the name "Ardito," and presented him with a gold pin with their insignia. Marinetti, the Futurist leader, directs his orchestra every night in the chief square, keeping everybody awake.

Women have not been backward in their enthusiasm. One Maurilia Bilia of Turin, fearing neither blockade nor carabineers, walked sixteen hours, overcoming every obstacle, and put herself at the disposition of the Supreme Command of Fiume.

TREASURES OF THE SEA

"It was a brave man who ate the first oyster," said Dean Swift.

And a true epicure, we might add, for the oyster is one of the daintiest morsels found in the treasure house of the sea.

In America alone more than fifty million dollars a year are spent for oysters.

At CHILDS they are particularly delicious because their tempting sea tang is so carefully preserved.

CITY CLUB ANSWERS THE MAYOR'S ATTACK

Denies Charge of Favoring Ettinger as Against Board of Education.

SPENCER WRITES LETTER

Administration Assailed for Cutting Appropriation for New Schools—"Wall Street" Influence Denied.

Nelson S. Spencer, President of the City Club, yesterday sent a letter to Mayor Hylan as an answer to the Mayor's letter to Anning S. Prall, President of the Board of Education. Mr. Spencer's letter in part says:

"Dear Sir.—I have read with interest and surprise a letter purporting to have been written by you to Anning S. Prall, President of the Board of Education, published in the morning papers, in which, if the publication be accurate, you make various statements concerning the City Club of New York which are without basis of fact. I beg you will permit me to correct you.

"The club is not, as you say, beginning a campaign in favor of Superintendent Ettinger and against the Board of Education. It has taken no action whatever. On Saturday last there was a conference held at the clubhouse, participated in by eighteen different organization, including among others the Chamber of Commerce, Charity Organization Society, Public Education Association, the Education Alliance, the New York Child Labor Committee, the Henry Street Settlement and four other settlements, and the Women's City Club, which was presided over by Lionel Sutro, Chairman of the club's Committee on Schools. At this conference two resolutions were referred by it to the various organizations represented for the independent action of each, which are as follows:

2. That in passing upon the final appropriation for the schools the jurisdiction of funds for all educational purposes be retained by the school authorities, with whom the responsibility is legally placed for determining and carrying out educational policies.

2. That responsibility for the administration of all educational matters under the Board of Education be centred in one person, the duly appointed chief executive under the law and expert administrator of the system, the City Superintendent, and that the Board of Education as a body, and not through any one of its individual members, determine the fundamental policies which shall guide and direct the Superintendent's action.

"All that the resolutions ask is that the law be complied with.

"You praise Mr. Prall for his stand for new school houses to properly house the school children of the city and imply that the City Club is opposed to this. The City Club is in favor of the expenditure of every dollar necessary to house every school child of school age in the City of New York. Your administration rescinded an appropriation of $11,500,000 made by the last administration for new school buildings and later substituted therefor one of $10,000,000. The parents of the houseless school children must wish that your enthusiasm for Mr. Prall's stand had been more timely, to say the least, and had taken the tangible form of a sufficient appropriation.

"You omit to specify who are the people in sympathy with Wall Street and public utility interests, who, as you allege, control the club. The reason—presumably—is that you are unable to do so. I can therefore only deny the charge absolutely. I may be permitted, however, to point out that with regard to the public utility interests, the action of the club regarding the increase of fares, transmitted to you and the other members of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment on Jan. 24, 1919, which was in support of the position taken by that board on the question, resulted in the resignation from membership in the club of Theodore Shonts, who had long been a member. It does not seem that you would have been willing to have made the statement with regard to the control of the club if you had read this report to which I have asked your attention."

WISE WOOD WIRES WILSON.

Assails President's Statement About Hyphenated Opposition to League.

Henry A. Wise Wood yesterday sent a telegram to President Wilson in which he characterized the statement made by the latter that the only organized forces opposed to the League of Nations outside of Congressional circles were hyphenated Americans as a falsehood. He called the attention of the President to the League for the Preservation of American Independence, which he said was formed last March to support those in the Senate who were opposed to the covenant in its present form. Mr. Wise Wood said that this organization was administered by men who, with Colonel Roosevelt and General Leonard Wood, had organized the preparedness movement.

Mr. Wise Wood said in part:

"I have not hesitated to characterize your statement with accuracy and plainness for the reason that you, having yourself fouled the robes of high office by your persistent use of distortion, half truth and untruth, and by your calumny of honest and patriotic men, have no longer the right to claim the protection of those robes when you are called upon to meet the consequences of your wholly inexcusable words and acts."

The telegram was addressed to the President at Wichita, Kan.

Girl Scouts to Open $100,000 Drive.

They will try to enroll 100,000 associate members, the membership fee being $1. Mrs. Wilson has presented Golden Eaglets to several girls at Washington, D. C., but no presentation has ever been made in New York.

Bank Robbers Made $60,000 Haul.

LANSING, Mich., Sept. 25.—The five men who yesterday broke into the Bank of Mulliken, near here, obtained at least $10,000 in cash and between $50,000 and $60,000 in Liberty bonds, officials of the bank announced today after checking over the records. No trace of the bandits has been found.

HAIG'S CAR FETCHES £3,780.

Confectioner Will Exhibit It—Lloyd George Now Provides His Own.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—Three thousand six hundred guineas were paid today for the motor car used by Field Marshal Haig in France. The car was one of a number sold at auction by order of the Ministry of Munitions, which is disposing of surplus army stocks.

The purchaser was a wholesale confectioner, who, with a keen eye to advertisement, intends to send the car to his stores in various parts of the country so that the public can see the historic vehicle.

As a result of the economy campaign several Ministers have given up cars placed at their disposal by the State during wartime. Winston Churchill, whose favorite automobile fetched a big price at auction the other day, now travels around in a Ford, and Lloyd George himself is using a car which is his own private property.

Some suggestions have been made that while the example thus set is good policy, it may prove "penny wise and pound foolish" in practice. It would be good economy from a national point of view, it is argued, for the State to furnish the Prime Minister with car, chauffeur, petrol, and the rest, rather than require him to give time and personal attention to looking after his own car which otherwise could be devoted to State affairs.

NEW AIR MAIL RECORD FROM CLEVELAND HERE

Two Pilots Cover 430 Miles with 355 Pounds of Mail in 2 Hours and 59 Minutes.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—Two Air Mail pilots broke the record for speed between Cleveland and New York today. They flew the 430 miles in two hours and fifty-nine minutes. Pilot Knight left Cleveland, according to a post office announcement, at 9:17 A. M. and arrived at Bellefonte, Penn., at 10:47 A. M. This flight of one hour and thirty minutes was at the rate of 143 miles per hour.

After spending thirteen minutes in changing planes Pilot Anglin left Bellefonte at 11 A. M. and arrived at New York at 12:29 P. M., flying the one hour and twenty minutes, at the rate of 145 miles per hour. A full load of mail, weighing 355 pounds, was carried in the two De Havilland planes equipped with Liberty motors.

A Glenn L. Martin bomber, with two 400-horse power Liberty motors, made the first non-stop flight ever directed by compass from Cleveland to Mitchel Field, Mineola, yesterday afternoon. The big plane carried four passengers and made the distance of 450 miles in 3 hours and 20 minutes. The flight was made entirely by compass between an upper and a lower cloud bank at an elevation of 9,000 feet.

ASKS HOUSE INQUIRY INTO WILSON GIFTS

WORTH $500,000, HE HEARD

Loth to Believe, He Says, the President Would Thus Violate the Constitution.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—Representative Rodenberg of Illinois introduced a resolution in the House today authorizing the Judiciary Committee to conduct an inquiry to ascertain whether President Wilson accepted the great number of presents he is reported to have brought back with him from Europe as gifts from foreign Governments and kings.

Mr. Rodenberg's resolution follows:

Whereas, during the month of February, 1919, the American people were informed by cablegrams from Paris that prior to his departure from the Murat Palace in that city the President of the United States had received and accepted gifts from various European kings, princes, foreign States and municipalities, and from other sources, public and private, and,

Whereas, on April 18, 1919, The Washington Times, one of the leading newspapers of this capital, published the following account of the receipt and deposit of such gifts of presents in the White House: "President's gifts here from Europe—A carload of European gifts to President and Mrs. Wilson has been received at the White House. The shipment is in about forty large boxes, and will not be unpacked until the Wilsons return"; and,

Whereas, it is the grave Constitutional duty of the House of Representatives to ascertain whether any or all of such gifts or presents were received and accepted by the President of the United States in violation of the legislation and laws; therefore, be

Be is resolved by the House of Representatives that the Judiciary Committee are hereby instructed to investigate such reports and that they have power to send for persons and papers, and to administer the customary oaths to witnesses to the end that the truth or falsity of such reports may be fully ascertained. In the discharge of that duty said Judiciary Committee are instructed

(1) To obtain a complete inventory of all such gifts or presents, if such have been in fact received and accepted as alleged;

(2) To ascertain the source from which each gift or present was so received and the value thereof;

(3) To ascertain at what Custom House, or Custom Houses, said gifts or presents were entered, what value of appraisement was put upon each, and what customs duties, if any, were paid upon the same;

(4) To ascertain whether or not said President has unlawfully received any other gifts from foreign sources during his term of office.

Said Judiciary Committee is further instructed to report all of such facts to the House of Representatives to the end that the House, in view of the facts and the law, may be able to determine what further action it may be its Constitutional duty to take in the premises.

"I have introduced this resolution for the purpose of clearing up the rumors that have been current for months that the President and the members of his family were made the recipients of gifts while in Europe, aggregating in value more than a half million dollars," said Mr. Rodenberg. "If there should be no foundation for these rumors, a great injustice is being done to the reputation of the President and he is entitled to an exoneration.

"Section 9 of Article 1 of the Constitution expressly provides that 'no person holding office of profit or trust in the United States shall without the consent of Congress accept of any present, emolument, office, or title, of any kind whatever, from any king, prince, or foreign State.'

"Personally I am loath to believe that any President of the United States would be guilty of violating the plain provision of the Constitution, but owing to the persistent repetition of these rumors the public is entitled to be fully advised as to their truth or falsity. It is also of the greatest importance that the public should be informed whether any members of the President's family or party that accompanied him to Paris, has received valuable gifts that have been passed through the Custom House of the United States without appraisal and without payment of the duty imposed by law.

"My resolution is comprehensive enough to cover every phase of this matter which, unless disproved as a result of an investigation, bids fair to become a national scandal."

SPURS UP BEER APPEALS.

Government Wants Supreme Court to Hurry 2.75 Decisions.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—The Supreme Court was asked by the Government today to expedite consideration of appeals from Federal Court decrees in Baltimore, Md., upholding the right of breweries to produce 2¾ per cent. beer under the Food Control act.

"Numerous cases are pending in the United States Courts which would be controlled by the Court's decision herein," the motion said. "Other Federal Courts have passed upon the matter and conflicting decisions have resulted. It is important, therefore, that an early decision may be had."

Mercier to be Guest of Merchants.

Cardinal Mercier will be the chief guest at a luncheon meeting of the Members Council of the Merchants Association at the Hotel Astor on Tuesday, Oct. 7. Because of the universal desire to meet the Cardinal the association has limited the tickets to one for each member. William C. Breed, Chairman of the Members' Council, will preside. The meeting is designed to be an expression of the high esteem which business men have for the Cardinal as a man and an influence in the world war.

JERSEY LIQUOR MEN TO TEST PROHIBITION

State Convention Instructs Legal Counsel to Fight 18th Amendment in Court.

HOPE TO TIE IT UP 2 YEARS

Their Position, Based On Theory That Thirteen Legislatures Usurped People's Rights.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 25.—Liquor interests of this State, delegates to the Annual Convention of the New Jersey State Liquor Dealers Protective League, laid plans today to start court proceedings to hold up the enforcement of the Federal Prohibition Amendment on constitutional grounds when the amendment would become operative on January 16.

The conviction was expressed that the other thirteen States holding the referendum privilege will join New Jersey in the test and so tie up the law that at least two years will have elapsed before the highest courts can give a final decision.

Following the advice of legal council the delegates at the sessions here today adopted resolutions calling upon their lawyers to institute injunction proceedings as the first step in the fight, the instant notice of the operation of the Federal amendment is served upon them.

Their principal fight will center around the fact that State Legislatures in referendum States ratifying the amendment usurped powers of the people, and they are confident that the courts will back them up in this claim. They are also convinced that many States that have been dry for years will be demanding a referendum, and once the proposition is put up to the people their battle will be won.

The dealers had been confident that the restrictions of the war-time prohibition law would be lifted shortly, but today they had information that changed their views. Leaders expressed the opinion that the war-time ban would still be in operation on January 16, and the anticipated short breathing spell would therefore not be granted them.

Former Congressman M. F. Farley, of New York, addressing the convention as the national legislative representative, asserted that there was no possibility of putting over any "wet" legislation. Congress, he averred, was easily three to one against any such overtures, so great was the influence of the Anti-Saloon League.

YANKEES GIVE THE ATHLETICS THEIR ONE HUNDREDTH TROUNCING OF THE SEASON

MACK YOUNGSTERS SHUT OUT BY YANKS

MOGRIDGE IN FINE FORM

Southpaw Allows Four Hits and No Visiting Player Reaches Third —Score Is 4 to 0.

A crowd of perfect strangers, wearing the uniforms of the Philadelphia Athletics, came to the Polo Grounds yesterday to play the last series of the season with the Yankees. The strangers were beaten 4 to 0, the Yanks thereby holding their own in the bitter struggle for third place money with Detroit. The Tigers also won, and are still only one decimal point behind Huggins's crew, almost stepping on their heels. The race to the wire between New York and Detroit is a prettier sprint than the struggle for first place, which ended Wednesday.

Yesterday's defeat was the Athletics' 100th loss of the season. A ball club has to be awful good to win 100 games in a season, but what do you think a club must be to lose 100 in a season, and in a short season at that? The Athletics can assimilate more punishment than any club of recent years. They can lose and lose and lose, and never seem to mind it. They trot out upon the field and play boldly, just as if they had nothing to be ashamed of.

Connie Mack recently went down to Atlanta and bought up the whole Atlanta outfit, and then picked up anything he saw along the highways and byways. Many of the players do not know each other's first names, because Connie hasn't had time to introduce them all around. Many of the strangers had never been to New York before, and they wanted to go down and see the Aquarium, the Woolworth Building, and the Bowery, instead of going up to the Polo Grounds.

Novelties and Antiques.

Connie went to extremes in collecting this troupe of ball players. He has lads in their teens and also has Terry Turner, the rare Cleveland antique, who can still cavort around as well as the younger talent. Mack had thirty ball players with him yesterday, besides old Harry Davis, which shows that Connie spends money like a sailor—on railroad tickets.

Even if they were beaten by the Yanks, this kindergarten class can play ball. For five innings they held the Yankees runless and then for no apparent reason Pitcher Johnson, who was going along like wildfire, was taken out of the box. Johnson gave the Yanks four hits in five innings, and was especially effective with men on the bases. Mack sent in a pitcher named Zinn in the sixth, and he was easy picking for the Yankee batsmen. They bunched hits on him in the sixth and eighth and collected their four runs.

Mack's yearlings showed all their skill in the field, but they swung their bats like a team of pitchers. At third base was a lad named Ewoldt, and he scooped up one yesterday just as cleverly as Arthur Devlin used to do in the old days. He gave this scintillating exhibition in the fifth inning, when Vick, his sister jammed an infield tap on the lawn. Ewoldt came bounding in, scooped up the ball with one hand and flipped it over to first while he was twisted into the shape of a pretzel. Very nice.

Another unknown at first, named Griffin, was all wool and a yard wide. He can stretch out for them like the rubber man in the circus and can hang onto the ball with two fingers. Griffin was the only one of the new troupe who could tickle Mogridge, and he got two of the Athletics' four hits. Dykes at second, Galloway at short, and J. Walker behind the bat are some of the newcomers who were playing their first game in Manhattan. Mack also has a pitcher named Hasty who ought to be pretty good if he is that way in speeding the ball.

Mogridge in Fine Form.

George Mogridge southpawed in his best style yesterday. He allowed only four scattered hits, and the Athletics never showed any symptoms of scoring. In fact, not one of Mack's new men got a peek at third base. As far as they know there is no third base on the Polo Grounds. A few of them got to second and looked over toward third, but they never made the trip. Any time one of the Mackleis got on first base that was the signal for Mogridge to tighten up and call a halt.

There were two out in the second inning when Duffy Lewis sneaked a scratchy infield hit to Dykes at second and hustled around to third when Fewster poked a single to center. Here was a good chance for Muddy Ruel to slap in a run or so, but Johnson ruled otherwise and Muddy fanned. Baker opened the fourth with a single to left. Pipp smacked a hot liner to Galloway, who gobbled it in, although it was a stinger, and doubled up Baker before he could get back to first. There were two out in the fifth when Ruel cracked a single to right centre. Mogridge ended the inning when he grounded to Griffin at first.

Up to this time it looked as if nobody was ever going to score. Connie Mack on the Athletics' bench became alarmed and feared that if Johnson kept up this kind of pitching the Athletics might win a game and the shock might give his youngsters nervous prostration. So he took Johnson out of the game and sent Zinn out for an airing on the hillock.

Zinn was apple pie a la mode for the Yanks. In the sixth, after Vick had fouled to Erwoldt, who made a fine catch over near the boxes, Peckinpaugh jammed a two-base drive to left. Baker hoisted a fly out to Walsh in centre and Pipp walloped a double to centre which pushed Peck home with the Yanks' first run. Pratt was chucked out at first by Galloway and there was no more tallying that inning. Zinn settled down in the seventh and a base on balls to Ruel constituted the Yankee offensive activities for that chapter.

Eighth Is Big Inning.

Then came the eighth, when the Yanks made the victory certain. Sam Vick opened the activities with a two-base smash to left. Peck was unselfish and sacrificed him to third. Baker planked a single to right and Vick romped over with a run. Pipp got a pass and both runners advanced a station when Zinn tossed Pratt out at first. Duffy Lewis poked a single to centre and Baker and Pipp scooted across with a couple more runs. Zinn was somewhat surprised and perhaps he didn't know who Baker was when he faced him. The new pitcher couldn't find the plate and Fewster walked. It was all over when Ruel bounced to Burns in right.

With two gone in the ninth Burns got a single to left, but he was stranded when Galloway popped to Peck. The Yankees have four more games to play with the Athletics, and they are out to win them all. They play one here today, two in Philadelphia on Saturday and one on Monday. Detroit has three more games to play, all with the White Sox. If the Yanks win all their games and Detroit does likewise the Yankees will get third place by an eyelash.

Curves and Bingles.

The Yankees' chances of getting third place and a split of the world's series spoils grow brighter every day. They have a much better chance of winning the remaining four games with the Athletics than Detroit has of winning their three with the champion White Sox.

Yesterday's crowd was about 4,000 and was as quiet as a church mouse. There is nothing left to the Athletics now but their name. Even their reputation is gone.

Connie Mack seems to have enough miscellaneous baseball talent on his lists to start a baseball employment agency.

This Atlanta club of Mack's might do better after the players have been in the North long enough to become acclimated.

The only remaining relics of the famous world's champion White Elephants are Amos Strunk on the bench and Harry Davis on the coaching lines.

A quieter baseball club has never played here. Not one of the visitors said a word yesterday. They spoke to each other in whispers and seemed scared to death of Ollie Chill, the smallest umpire on the Western Hemisphere.

Nevertheless, these boys ought to make a good ball club if Mack can hang on to them until they grow up.

This Winter ought to be a great season for trades. The Athletics will be in a position to give a club half a dozen promising youths for a ball player.

If Mack's experiment of transplanting the Southern Association team to Philadelphia isn't a success, he can still shift the Philadelphia Club to the South and see if that works out any better.

Manager Huggins hasn't had a chance to try out any of the young talent he has corralled during the last few weeks. He has got to keep his regulars at top speed to beat out Detroit, so some of the phenoms will not get a chance to show their skill until next Spring.

GIANTS AND BRAVES AGAIN BREAK EVEN

New York Gets 24 Hits in Opener and Wins, 14 to 2—Boston Takes Second, 8 to 4.

BOSTON, Sept. 25.—The Giants and Braves mingled in another twin bill here this afternoon and honors again were divided as in the double header yesterday. The New Yorkers got the verdict in the opening engagement, which was the hardest hitting game of the season at Braves' Field, by the score of 14 to 2. In the closing number the home team went into the lead in the third inning, was never headed, and finished up an easy winner by the score of 8 to 4.

Batting averages of the younger members of the McGraw troupe soared skyward in the first game, much of the soaring being at the expense of Cecil Causey, a former member of the New York club. Frank Fritsch added a home run, a triple and a single to his growing string of hits, while George Kelly spanked out a triple and a pair of doubles. Elmer Smith ran his hit string up with a single, a double and a triple, while Arnold Statz got a double and a brace of singes. The kid members of the team did not have the hitting all to themselves, as Ross Young and Art Fletcher of the veteran cast collected four and three hits, respectively.

Before Causey was removed from the slaughter at the close of the fourth inning he had been jolted for ten hits. McQuillan, who replaced the former Giant, yielded fourteen more. The twenty-four drives by the New York players netted a total of forty bases.

Runs Come in Clusters.

Acting Manager Christy Mathewson started Rube Benton on the mound for the Giants and Rube gave way to Fred Toney after the Braves had scored in the fourth. Toney had the home team at his mercy after he replaced Benton in the box.

A pass to Burns, singles by Young and Frisch, and Pick's low throw gave the Giants two runs in the first inning. In the fourth inning Kelly doubled to left, Elmer Smith tripled and scored on an infield out. Burns, who had walked, scored ahead of Frisch when the latter's drive to centre field went for a home run. Red Smith misjudging the ban. Singles by Burns, Young, and Fletcher, a double by Statz, two stolen bases and two Boston errors gave the Giants three runs in the sixth. Two more runs were added in the seventh on Kelly's double, Smith's single, and Young's triple to centre, Carroll losing the ball in the sun. In the ninth Smith doubled to centre and scored on Toney's single. Young singled and scored with Toney, when Frisch tripled to left.

Boston pushed over a run in the third inning on Maranville's single. Causey's sacrifice, and J. Smith's single to left. In the fourth the Braves scored their second and last run. Thorpe was safe on an error by Fletcher, reached second on an out, third on Boeckel's single to centre, and he scored on Gowdy's infield hit.

Young Pitchers Ineffective.

The first game indicated that this was the day for youngsters, so Matty gave two of McGraw's rookie hurlers an opportunity to show their skill in the second engagement. The two games were as different as black and white. The Giants got ten hits off Jack Scott, but were unable to do any real damage except in the seventh inning, when four were bunched for three of New York's four runs. Two more were bunched for another run in the ninth.

Colonel Snover, a protege of Jack Murray, started the second game, and errors, timely hits and passes enabled the Braves to pick up a good lead before he departed in the sixth inning. Benny Kauff batted for the "Colonel" in the seventh and helped along a rally which brought the Giants dangerously close to the home team. Virgie Barnes then went to the hill and he was hit harder than his predecessor, the Braves pulling away again into a safe lead.

The Braves went to the lead with three runs in the fourth after both teams had been held scoreless up to that time. A pass to Pick and two errors by Doyle filled the bases and the three runners scored on Holke's sacrifice fly and singles by Maranville and Wilson. In the sixth another run was added. Powell was hit, Snover fumbled Carroll's roundup, and then came singles by Boeckel and Wilson which produced a run.

The Giants got three in the seventh on McCarty's triple and singles by Statz, Kauff and Young. Six hits off Virgie Barnes in the seventh and eighth, coupled with an error by Frisch, gave the Braves four runs.

The Giants scored their last run in the ninth on Snyder's single and steal and a double by Chase.

FIVE-RUN CLUSTER WINS FOR PHILLIES

Dodgers Have Apparently Safe Lead in Eighth Inning, but Lose Game, 10 to 9.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 25.—When the Dodgers ended their half of the eighth inning this afternoon, the score was 9 to 5 in their favor. They had just scored four runs themselves, and it looked as though they had put the old ball game away in cold storage for the Winter. This was the exact moment, however, when came the deluge. The Phillies slammed over five runs in their half of the same frame and won the game by a count of 10 to 9.

Cravath and Meusel, both pinch hitting, were the prime movers in the final rally that left the afternoon's see-saw with the Quaker outfit occupying the northernmost end. There were two out and the bases were filled when Meusel came to the bat. Meusel took two strikes and let three bad ones pass before Cadore sent up one to his liking. Meusel cuffed it to centre for a Texas League single and the bases were cleared.

This left the Phillies still one run behind, with Meusel on first, and set the stage admirably for Manager Cravath's double specialty of pinch-hitting and knocking out home runs. Gabby delivered. The ball landed in the left field bleachers and Meusel trotted home ahead of his boss. Leon B. C. Ames pitched for the Phillies in the ninth, and the score remained just as it was at the end of the eighth. Leon seemed to have all the old stuff on the ball, and the Dodgers were turned back meekly in one-two-three order. In general, however, it was not a profitable afternoon for pitchers.

Two circuit clouts by Krueger in the seventh and eighth innings gave the Dodgers their briefly held advantage. Krueger sent one man home ahead of him in the seventh and two in the eighth, accounting for five runs in all. The other tally had already been scored when Krueger hit into the bleachers in the eighth frame. It was a prosperous afternoon for the home-run merchants, for Blackburne landed on Cadore for four bases in the third, with one man on.

Robins Start the Run-getting.

Brooklyn started the run-getting in the opening round. Olson doubled to centre and went to third on Johnston's long fly to left. Ivy was held at third, while Bancroft was being thrown out, but scored a moment later when Pratt's throw was wild, trying to catch Zach Wheat at first. Cadore tamed the Quakers in their half of the same frame.

Konetchy doubled to right and reached third on a sacrifice in the second inning but nothing came of it. Konetchy being out trying to score on Krueger's grounder. The Quakers were more successful, scoring six runs on Luderus's double and singles by Bancroft and Paulette. They duplicated this feat in the succeeding stanza a base on balls to Lab around and Blackburne's home run into the left-field stands being productive of another brace of counters.

The Dodgers came back with a pair of runs in the fourth. Wheat beat out a hit to Luderus, and went to the far corner when Myers doubled to the right-field wall. Konetchy singled and Wheat and Myers came home. The Phillies boosted their total one more in their half. With one man down, Paulette walked, stole second, and completed the round trip on Adams's base hit.

The fifth and sixth were the first, and, apart from the ninth, the only scoreless innings. Baird started the seventh for Brooklyn with a stinging single to left field. Then came Krueger's first home run, which tied the score.

The Cataclysmic Eighth.

Griffith opened the ceremonies for the Robins in the cataclysmic eighth with a walk. Wheat filed out to Williams, but Myers came through with a safety to left. Koney was also presented with first, and the bases were crammed. Smith was taken out of the box and Cheney went in. Baird sent out a sacrifice fly to Callahan that enabled Griffith to score and Krueger followed with his second home run in two innings, knocking the ball again into the left-field stands and sending Myers and Konetchy home ahead of him.

SIGNS 2-YEAR CONTRACT.

Cravath Agrees to Manage Phillies During 1920 and 1921.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 25.—Clifford C. (Gavvy) Cravath, the veteran home-run king of the Phillies, who succeeded Jack Coombs as manager of the club last July, today signed a two-years' contract to Continue as pilot of the club. No terms were mentioned, but it is understood that Gavvy is to get $9,000 per season as skipper of the club. While Cravath will probably bring the Phils in a tailender this year, President Baker is satisfied with what Cravath achieved during his two and a half months as a big league pilot and feels sure that the burly Californian will get results next year.

Cravath is to have a free rein in trading and signing players and several of the present outfit are to be swapped during the coming Winter if Gavvy can close any deals with other clubs. Cravath already has signed two of his men for next year, Irish Meusel having signed for two years and Gene Paulette for one.

CATCHING MAY BE DECIDING FACTOR

Billy Evans Predicts Backstops Will Play Prominent Part in World Series.

BOTH TEAMS ARE STRONG

Schalk's Pep and Unusual Plays Make Him One of Greatest in History of Game.

By BILLY EVANS,
American League Umpire.

What part does a catcher play in the winning of a pennant?

If Ray Schalk, the "human dynamo" of the Chicago White Sox, had been put out of the running during the season because of an injury that query would probably have been answered. Certainly the Sox would have had their troubles to win.

If you should ask Pat Moran for one good reason why the Cincinnati Reds prospered in 1919 he would undoubtedly speak of his catching staff. In Bill Rariden and Ivy Wingo, Moran had two catchers who gave his team excellent mechanical services coupled with brainy judgment.

When the Cincinnati Reds went South in the Spring none of the critics gave much consideration to the pitching staff. Most of them thought the Reds had a pretty fair bunch of twirlers, but nothing to enthuse over. Pat Moran had a different idea. A brainy catcher himself when in his prime, he saw great possibilities in the staff of the Reds. He early imparted that thought to Rariden and Wingo, and then proceeded to make each pitcher have a similar opinion of himself and the rest of the staff. Throughout the season Rariden and Wingo, by their excellent handling of the selections made by Moran, contributed materially to Cincinnati's success.

An Important Position.

In a short series of nine games the work of the catchers plays a decidedly important part in the success or failure of a club. The brainy catcher must try to outguess the opposition. If he believes the steal or hit-and-run is on, it is up to him to waste one, with a hope of breaking it up. On the other hand, the calling for too many waste balls is apt to get his pitcher into considerable trouble if the opposition fails to play as the catcher figured it.

As each batter steps into the box a problem immediately confronts the catcher. He must call on the pitcher's stock in trade for the delivery which he believes will most puzzle the batsman. In most cases the pitcher depends almost entirely on the judgment of his catcher. If in a pinch he calls for a curve and the batter hits safely, driving in a couple of runs, there are always a lot of second guessers who will opine that he never should have used a curve, that a fast one, high and on the outside, was the only proper ball to have called for. This thing of being a catcher is far from a merry life. Every one has the second guess on you.

While Bill Rariden and Ivy Wingo are two great catchers, they lack the color of Ray Schalk. Wingo and Rariden go about their work in a quiet, methodical way, while little Ray yet they get it most efficiently. Schalk, on the other hand, is the original "pepperpot" of the backstops. He fairly exudes ginger. He isn't still a minute. If he isn't saying kind or hard things to his pitcher he is getting after, first, Gandil, then Collins, next Risberg, and lastly Weaver, for their failure to keep things stirring. It's a shrill whistle after giving the signal is a bit of by-play all his own that keeps the rest of the boys on their toes. When the pitcher appears to be loafing or getting a bit careless, Schalk proceeds to return the ball with such speed that one begins to wonder who is really doing the pitching.

Schalk's First Game.

I happened to umpire the first ball game that Schalk worked in the American League. He impressed me from the start with his style. I said to myself, a real live-wire

COOPERSTOWN RIDERS DEFEAT ROCKAWAY IN FIRST GAME OF SERIES FOR OPEN POLO TITLE

COOPERSTOWN GAINS FINAL POLO ROUND

Defeats Rockaway by 6 to 3¾ and Will Play Meadow Brook for Open Title.

STODDARD IS BRILLIANT

High-Speed Charge in Second Period a Feature of Match—Father and Son Are Opponents.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 25.—Riding with the abandon of Bedouins, often thundering in aligned charges the length of the green oval, level and springy as an African veldt, the splendidly mounted Cooperstown polo quartet triumphed over the Rockaway Four, 6 to 3¾ goals, on the Philadelphia Country Club field this afternoon. The victors qualified to compete in the final contest of the title tourney for the open championship of America. On Saturday they will meet Meadow Brook.

It was a thrilling battle, filled with tense situations, this game which is the sport of kings played by gentlemen of dash and courage. There was no scoring in the third and fifth periods, in these chukkers the play was keen, even fierce, spectacular shots, some backhanded, and others at extreme angles, preventing goals just when they appeared imminent. Every minute of the fray contained something of interest. It was fraught with brilliancy, long, lofting drives, rare strokes that carried the ball along the greenward toward the goal, sometimes to shoot through for a coveted goal, at others to be diverted from its course either by a wonderfully adroit stroke or by a smashing, powerful drive.

A high speed play resulted in a goal by Louis Stoddard for the winners almost at the start of the second period. It was a wonderful effort of individual skill, perhaps surpassing in brilliancy anything contained in the game. The ball was in close scrimmage, more than half the players vainly trying to start it on a rolling career to either end of the oval. It was past midfield toward the goal defended by Rockaway. Then in an instant the ball shot out of the ruck. After it charged the thundering Stoddard, yards in advance of any player. The air resounded with the clatter of hoofs as the ponies raced to overtake Stoddard. Once he drove the ball when about midfield. Straight as the course of an arrow it rolled.

Perhaps a hundred yards in front of the goal, never for an instant slackening the gait of his pony, he slightly rose in his saddle, took a full, round smashing swing at the still rolling sphere, and forward it shot with added impetus. It was a goal in twenty seconds.

Both Scored in Second Period.

The second period was the most productive in scoring. Each side drove the ball through the white uprights twice for goals. With four scores in this period after a single goal in the opening chukker, the game threatened to develop into a free scoring fray. But the defense of each team tightened perceptibly after the ending of the second.

The third was a period of tight defense, in which each team threatened several times, but always at the crucial instant some player, with streng arm and deft stroke, took the ball right out of the mouth of the goal.

The first period developed a stubborn defense by each four. In this period some brilliant defensive work was done. Close to the end, Robert E. Strawbridge, Jr., playing back position for Cooperstown against his father for Rockaway, by a back-handed stroke at a difficult angle, shot the ball for the victors' first goal. Young Strawbridge well merited the vociferous applause following his expert effort.

Although the first half of the game ended 4 to 2 in favor of Cooperstown, the difference in play had not been so marked as to presage a victory for the leaders. The sterling defense of the third period was continued into the fourth. The play was fast and furious. Twice in the fourth period the teams clashed in fierce rushes close to the boards, probably the most dangerous of polo play to players and ponies. Once the ball was run more than half the length of the field, bounding and rebounding near the boards the entire distance.

Pretty Goal by Hitchcock.

So covered was the attack of each team in the fourth period that almost a minute overtime had been played before a goal was scored. It was by the hard-working, true-stroking Hitchcock, who hooked the ball by an adroit backhand stroke. It glided through with no one near to restrain it.

The second half developed some wonderful defense and brilliant attack. There was no scoring in the fifth. The sixth was so evenly waged that time had almost expired when Hitchcock, dexterously working the ball out of a closes crimmage in which almost every man was engaged, by one vigorous back-handed stroke speeded the ball straight through the goal opening.

The form exhibited by Earl Hopping in the latter part of the contest was of the highest order. Not only did he play a good team game, but his individual brilliancy probably surpassed that of any other man. Of the four goals scored by Rockaway, Hopping's skill accounted for three. Two of them came late in the game. In fact, he was the last to score.

Cooperstown made victory almost beyond peradventure when Rumsey shot the ball for the winner's sixth and last goal after a little more than a minute's play in the seventh period. The ball had been worked well beyond midfield by the combined efforts of the entire team. Then with just one stroke needed, Rumsey gave the requisite impetus by a backhand swing at an almost impossible angle.

Rockaway was stimulated to desperate play in the last part of the seventh and in all of the eighth. Apparent defeat urged this quartet to its best offensive display of the game. The attack was even stronger than i the second period when the team counted twice, stronger because Cooperstown displayed a fiercer and more combined defense.

But Rockaway had one player able to break down and drive through Cooperstown's defense. This was Hopping. His goal late in the seventr period rivaled that by Stoddard in the second. Once with a clear field, Hopping gave the spectators an opportunity to cheer his hard, furious riding and smashing, accurate driving. His last drive, a long, looping smash, carried the ball a full fifty yards for a goal.

Hopping's Brilliant Play.

To Hopping's brilliancy was due Rockaway's final goal, the only score in the last period, which was featured by hard riding and superior mallet work by both sides. So compact was the defense that a goal appeared almost impossible. Each side had opportunities to score, but the threatened goal always faded in front of some deft stroke at an extreme angle, or a smashing drive straight ahead. Finally the co-ordinated attack of Rockaway carried the ball almost the entire length of the field, the senior Strawbridge assisting by one drive that carried for yards and yards. However, the ball did not have direction for the goal. It needed a stroke of finesse. Hopping was there to give it. A delicate, almost dribbling touch sent the ball rolling leisurely between the uprights at the most extreme angle that any goal had been scored. It was the acme of finished skill, a fitting effort to close a great game. A little more than a minute remained to end the game, and before the teams could get well in action again the bell sounded the end.

KREWER FIRST IN OAKDALE HANDICAP

Colt Which Sam Hildreth Buys for $6,000 Immediately Wins $2,625 for New Owner.

Sam C. Hildreth, who has recently made several additions to his stable of turf stars, does not wait long for returns on his investments. At the sales which preceded the racing at Aqueduct yesterday he paid $6,000 to J. J. O'Toole for Krewer, and an hour or two later saw the colt win the Oakdale Handicap, which was the feature for the day. Krewer won $2,625 for his new owner before he had had time to eat a meal in his new barn.

Krewer has only recently come back to his best form, but in his recent races he had demonstrated that he is one of the best of the juveniles left on the local tracks. His victory yesterday was the most impressive of any, for he took the measure of J. E. Widener's Pilgrim and Mrs. Jefford's Kinnoul, in a field of five starters, and won so handily that he was never extended.

Padraic 4 and Royal Duck were scratched from the original list of starters and Kinnoul was added. The latter is gifted with speed but is partial to a muddy track and from himself at a disadvantage against high class youngsters and over a track that had become fast. Krewer was made favorite at 9 to 5, and was well played, for the news that he had passed into a Hildreth's hands added to his following.

Kinnoul was first to break over this six furlong dash and he was in the lead for about a hundred yards when Krewer came up, raced with him for a few strides and then drew away. The fleet son of Alford increased his lead to three lengths going around the turn, and coming through the stretch he was so far out in front that the race was safely his.

Kinnoul and Pilgrim were running close together, but in the final furlong Kinnoul decided he had raced enough and lagged back so that Pilgrim came on to take the place by two lengths. White Sox and Sagamore were so far out of it at all stages that Kinnoul held third place safe by three lengths despite the fact that he was well raced out.

King Plaudit a Disappointment.

The Brookside Stable's King Plaudit, which had not raced since the Summer meeting at Aqueduct, was the disappointment of the day. King Plaudit was one of the most promising of the three-year-olds at the beginning of the season and ran some very creditable races. He ran fourth in the Preakness, and came on to the local tracks to become one of the popular horses. He pulled up lame at Aqueduct and was not started again until yesterday, when he was sent to the post for a mile test against Jock Scot, War Machine, Fell Swoop, and Star Realm.

King Plaudit was the favorite and was one of the best supported horses of the day. As the barrier was sprung King Plaudit refused to break with the others. He propped his legs and would not budge. Jockey Fator tugged at his head and the colt simply wheeled over to the fence and turned around in the wrong direction of the course. A groan went up from the stands when it was seen that the favorite had failed to get away. It appeared at first that King Plaudit had suffered some injury. By the time the other horses had reached the turn King Plaudit was finally induced to break. He leaped out and seemed to be full of speed. Fator, however, drove him up to a gallop then and came around to the stands as the others were nearing the stretch.

The race went to Mrs. R. L. Bresler's Jock Scot, which had little difficulty in defeating War Machine by three lengths, while the latter took the place from Fell Swoop by six lengths.

When Fator finally got around to the stands with King Plaudit the horse was roundly hissed by some of his disappointed backers. Fator was at a loss to account for the actions of the colt which, though having a mean temper, had never acted in that manner before. The race was won by Jock Scot in 1:39 2-5. A few minutes later George Odom, who trains King Plaudit, sent his colt over the mile route in 1:38 2-5.

The workout was little balm for those who had backed him, but King Plaudit demonstrated that he had his old speed when he wanted to run. His race yesterday was to have been a test to decide whether he would be entered for the $50,000 Latonia Championship.

Panaman Runs Good Race.

Nash Turner's Panaman ran another of his good races and captured the Banaster Handicap, which was the first event of the day. This was at seven furlongs, and Panaman disposed of R. T. Wilson, Jr's, Thunderstorm and Richard Cook's Albert A. among the nine which went to post. Panaman went to the front with the springing of the barrier and won despite being badly bumped at the first turn. At this point Turf raced up close to him and, bumping into him, knocked Panaman out of his stride. The latter was thrown off so badly that he fell back to third, while Turf and Albert A. went out in front.

Jockey Frach got Panaman back into his stride going around the last bend into the stretch and, once straightened out, sent his mount along again. Panaman still had plenty of speed despite his mishap and quickly overtook the leaders to come under the wire with a length and a half to spare. Thunderstorm took the place from Albert A. by half a length, while Turf, after causing so much trouble, retired to fourth position.

The steeplechase event went to E. G. Heider's Gold Bond, which fenced nicely and showed fine speed, defeating Prince Hal 2d, while Nonesuch took third after Kismer fell at the last jump. Gold Bond was kept off the pace for the first turn of the field, but took command on the last turn and raced Prince Hal and Kismer into submission. Kismer had dropped back to third, while Nonesuch was trailing the field by an eighth of a mile. At the last jump Kismer went down, but neither horse nor rider was injured.

Lawrence Waterbury's Sundial 2d won an easy victory over Osgood and Sunningdale at a mile. Sundial was rated behind the pace to the head of the stretch, where he came up and took the lead from Osgood to win handily. Sunningdale was last all the way and trailed in six lengths back of Osgood.

J. E. Widener's Fair Gain graduated from the maiden class in the six-and-a-half-furlong dash for two-year-olds, which closed the card. Fair Gain and Georgie were the ones chiefly fancied. R. L. Gerry's Indiscretion raced out in front for a short distance, when Fair Gain and Georgie came up and fought it out. Ensor gave Fair Gain the advantage of a very good ride and brought the colt down in front by a length, while Georgie took the place from King's Champion by three lengths.

TWO BLUE RIBBONS IN A SINGLE CLASS

Judges Cut Gordian Knot in Test Between Two Young Riders at Mineola.

There was an unusual happening in a children's class yesterday on the second afternoon of the Mineola Horse Show, held in connection with the annual fair of the Queens-Nassau Agricultural Society. In a class for saddle horses of any height, to be ridden by children under 15 years of age, there was such an even balance in looks, gaits, and quality between Miss Corinne Poth's gray gelding Limestone Bounce and Miss Constance Sala Regan's black mare The Brunette that the judges, J. Garner West and George B. Hulme, were in a quandary.

They could place the others in the class of nine readily enough, but how to award the blue was a puzzle to them. Finally they had the children change mounts, to note if this would make any difference in the way the nags acted. Although so young, both girls have figured in such competitions at the National Horse Show, and, as a proof of their adaptability as to hands and equestrian skill, the change did not solve the riddle the judges were laboring with. They finally, figuratively speaking, threw up their hands and handed out blue ribbons to each of the riding damsels, an unprecedented happening at this old Long Island fixture.

As racing folks would say, it was a dead heat for first. Although the conditions allowed horses of any height, the idea being it would be interesting to see children riding in competition on mounts of all sizes from Shetlands to hunters, as a fact the mounts ranged from 15 to 15.3 hands. The judges placed C. F. Hubbs's Springtime, a former champion of the Brooklyn shows, third, and Miss Beatrice Bailey's Everett fourth.

A feature, too, of the saddle horse classes was the victory of Charles Butler's chestnut gelding and mare, Victory and Johanna, the latter a novice until this show, in the large class for pairs, one to be ridden by a woman, the other by a man. Second honors went to S. K. Jacobs's Sparkling Moselle and Sandy McDonald, winners under these conditions at Pipping Rock last Saturday and, since owned by Mr. Jacobs until before when exhibited by A. W. Atkinson, regarded as the champions—as the champion saddle-horse pair. In another class, for saddle horses, over 14.2 and not exceeding 15 hands, J. A. P. Ransdell's b. g. Lightnin', won the blue in a class of seven over C. F. Hubbs's Nidalla, but it was a close thing between them.

In the class for ladies' qualified hunters, ladies to ride, the winner was a slashing 16-hand bay gelding, Radnor, owned by W. Russell Grace and ridden by Miss El

DEAN LEADS GOLFERS AT NASSAU

DEAN WINS MEDAL IN GOLF TOURNEY

Makes Low Score in Qualifying Round of Invitation Event on Nassau Links.

GRAHAM AND BEALL IN TIE

Divide Honors of Second Place—Great Field Starts in Tournament at Glen Cove.

Golfing for the metropolitan amateurs was resumed yesterday at the Nassau Country Club in Glen Cove, L. I., with a good, healthy entry list of many of the leaders herabouts and a few outsiders thrown in for good measure. After a lapse of a couple of weeks while the professionals have monopolized the interest around New York, 112 amateurs called for caddies and teed off in the three-day invitation tournament at Nassau, the first to be held since 1915.

It fell to the lot of a young college man, J. Simpson Dean of Princeton, to receive the customary congratulations after his eighteen holes. Dean returned the lowest card for the qualifying round and thereby won the medal with his total of 77. Dean's victory gave him the bulge on several of the more experienced linksmen, as for instance Gardiner W. White, present Nassau Club champion. White could finish no better than fifth with his score of 80. S. J. Graham, of Greenwich, and E. C. Beall, of Uniontown, Penn., finished in a tie for second honors with cards of 78, and J. C. Parrish, Jr., of the National Club at Southampton, was fourth with a 79.

One of the surprises of the play was the return to the ancient and honorable game of such a noted devotee as Fred Herreshoff. This marked the first tournament in which Herreshoff has played in three years, during which time he has been in the army and in France.

Not Yet in Form.

Herreshoff has a good many rough edges on his game, which used to spin along like clock work, and his score of 91 was forty-fourth from the top. Herreshoff's return to golfing, however, was regarded with significance and his work on the links for the remainder of this Fall will be watched with interest. He will be remembered as the finalist in the 1911 national amateur tournament at Apawamis who lost the championship by the merest iota of misfortune. That grand old final round was played before 12,000 persons, by far the biggest golf gallery ever assembled in the United States. Harold H. Hilton, former British amateur and open champion, had Herreshoff 7 up and twelve holes to play before the American got under way, squared the match and kept it even until the thirty-sixth hole. In the first extra hole, Hilton's drive struck a glancing blow on a large bowlder, since named "Hilton's Rock," at Apawamis, carromed off to the green, and Hilton took the hole, the match, and the American amateur title by 4 strokes to 5.

Another golfer with a glorious past, who is in the present Nassau tourney, is Harry K. B. Davis, Jr., of Presidio, Cal. Davis is the former Pacific Coast champion and finished in the second sixteen with a score of 87.

Dean, yesterday's medalist, is playing an exceptionally consistent game this season in the tournaments he enters, although he has invariably failed to continue any great distance after the match play gets under way. He won the medal in both the Wilmington and the Lynnewood Hall series this Summer, and in the Sleepy Hollow invitation affair he progressed to the semi-final round before being eliminated by Max Marston. Yesterday Dean found the going outward especially good and he actually finished the first nine holes in two strokes under par. He did both the second and third holes in one stroke under regulation, and rounded the turn after getting a 3 on the par 4 ninth. Coming in Dean found the common difficulty with the others against the high wind which swept the Nassau links. On three holes he misjudged the velocity and used wooden clubs where iron shots would have been better, and he took a 41 against a par of 37 for the nine holes. His card follows:

Out .....4 4 4 3 5 5 5 3 3—36
In .....5 5 4 4 5 3 5 5 5—41—77

Wind a Handicap.

Graham, who finished in a tie for second, also did the first half in brilliant style, finishing in one stroke under par. On the 146-yard fourth hole Graham cupped his ball for a birdie 2. His trip toward the clubhouse was also marred by the wind and he, too, made a 41 for the second half.

Match play will begin this morning at 9 o'clock. First and second rounds will be completed today and the semi-finals and final matches are carded for tomorrow. Each round goes eighteen holes. This morning Dean will meet John M. Ward of Garden City, the old-time New York Giants' short stop, pitcher, and second sacker, manager, and so forth. Ward yesterday finished with an 81, which boosted him into a three-cornered tie for sixth place with M. L. Fearey, a clubmate, and J. S. O'Rourke, Jr., of the home links. Other results of the draw place Graham and Hamilton K. Kerr of Greenwich together, Gardiner White and R. N. B. Fay, and Beall and William L. Hicks. They are all in the top half of the bracket and Dean and Ward are down near the foot of the second half.

There will be five sixteens of match play today and four brackets of the beaten eights. The third sixteen will have the honor, teeing off at 9 o'clock, followed in order by the second, first, fourth, and fifth sixteens. Pairs will be sent out at five-minute intervals.

The scores of the qualifying rounds follow:

J. Simpson Dean, Princeton, 36, 41—77; S. J. Graham, Greenwich, 37, 41—78; E. C. Beall, Uniontown, 38, 40—78; J. C. Parrish, Jr., National, 40, 39—79; Gardinew W. White, Nassau, 40, 40—80; M. L. DR. ADAMS AGAIN CHAMPION.

Wins Union League Golf Club Title for Fourth Consecutive Year.

A couple of score of Union Leaguers neglected politics, banking, surgery, and their other pleasures yesterday afternoon to run up to the links of the Knollwood Country Club in White Plains for the annual one-day tournament of their own golf club, and they finished the eighteen holes with scores varying in degree of excellence from 83 to 127. It was a well-spent and enjoyable afternoon, especially so for Dr. Warren S. Adams, who returned to the clubhouse with a really low score. He made the round in 83 for low gross honors, and his handicap of 8 gave him a net of 75.

D. L. Luke carried off the title of low net man. He rounded the Knollwood circuit in 88, and, with the liberal handicap of 18, his score was lowered to a respectable 70.

The various scores, good, poor, and not so bad, follow:

D. L. Luke, 88, 18—70; Henry J. Cochran, 87, 14—73; L. H. Lapham, 88, 14—74; F. T. Ley, 88, 14—74; F. W. Westlake, 92, 18—74; A. G. Scherer, 95, 20—75; Dr. Warren S. Adams, 83, 8—75; Wilson P. Foss, 95, 20—75; J. A. Robinson, 97, 21—76; John A. Le Boutillier, 95, 18—77; J. W. Herbert, 97, 20—77; H. S. Redfield, 85, 6—79; W. H. McNeill, Jr., 101, 22—79; G. A. Blood, 98, 18—80; E. R. Lancaster, 98, 18—80; W. M. Bennett, 94, 14—80; W. H. Evans, 101, 21—81; G. T. Kirby, 101, 20—81; Philip Le Boutillier, 93, 11—82; R. H. Goffe, 98, 16—82; W. R. Hees, 107, 24—83; H. A. Ley, 98, 15—83; L. F. Gray, 100, 17—83; G. V. Haggerty, 102, 18—84; C. L. Meyers, 112, 28—84; F. R. Towne, 103, 18—85; T. Hetzler, 117, 30—87; Horace L. Hotchkiss, 115, 28—87; F. K. Seggerman, 116, 28—88; Simeon Ford, 108, 20—88; F. G. Hobbs, 110, 22—88; W. Ferguson, 108, 19—89; Thomas E. Kirby, 117, 28—89; R. A. Kahan, 117, 30—89; Henry Staton, 120, 30—90; F. H. Finch, 112, 18—94; C. T. Corey, 118, 22—96; J. Lee Mahin, 127, 27—100.

WOMEN ON JERSEY LINKS.

Miss Hardin and Mrs. Schrieber Tie in Baltusrol Tournament.

Woman golfers of the Metropolitan district journeyed over into New Jersey yesterday afternoon for one of the series of tournaments which was held at Baltusrol. The low score honors were divided between Miss E. A. Hardin and Mrs. T. C. Schrieber, both players from the home club, whose knowledge of the turns and tricks of Baltusrol aided them in getting 97s with the handicap allowance. Miss Hardin's score of 101 for gross was easily the best, and her handicap was 4. Mrs. Schrieber turned in a 103, which was cut down by a handicap of 6. Other low totals were furnished by Miss L. Seligman, Hollywood, with 111—10, 101, and Mrs. Drake, Morris County, with the same score.

Mrs. Thomas Hacknell, semi-finalist in the women's national championship, won the putting competition, with a total of 42 for the eighteen holes. The driving event was captured by Mrs. F. E. Du Bois of Raritan Valley.

DIEGEL LEADS GOLF STARS.

His 147 Is Best for First Round in Ohio Open Championship.

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 25.—Leo Diegel of Detroit, with a total of 147 for the 36 holes, led the field of 53 professionals and amateurs who began the 72-hole competition at Inverness Club here today for the Ohio open championship. Alexander Ross, another Detroiter, was but one stroke behind Diegel, with a 148 total. Walter Hagen, a third Detroiter and national open champion, and James Barnes of St. Louis, Western open champion, were tied for third, with 152 each.

A number of entries, including Gil Nicholls, withdrew after making poor scores in the morning round. The final 36 holes will be played tomorrow. A hard and fast course resulted in many high scores, but one par score of 72 being made for a round. Alexander Ross being credited with this score for his afternoon round.

N. Y. U. STAR RETURNS.

Weinheimer, 1916 Half Back, Is Welcome Addition to Violet Squad.

Football prospects at New York University showed improvement yesterday afternoon when Jack Weinheimer, star half back of the 1916 team, appeared at practice on Ohio Field. This addition will give the Violet unexpected strength in the backfield this season. Weinheimer is an all-around athlete, having been one of the mainstays of the baseball team in 1916. At football he made a name for himself as an exceptionally good broken-field runner. He is a tall, well-built player with lots of speed, and is a wonderful dodger.

The Violet squad had its regular practice session yesterday and Coach Longwell immediately put Weinheimer in the first string lineup. Signal drill went smoothly for the first part of the afternoon, and the squad was then put on the tackling dummy. After about half an hour of practice in tackling and in taking out interference, the second team lined up against the 'Varsity for scrimmage. Weinheimer and Horrigan made large gains through the line, and Cann and Mooney skirted the ends with good success. Baker, Joe Esquirol, and Guiney did fine work in making holes.

POUNDS CORNELL LINE.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Sept. 25.—The second 'Varsity, with the aid of several changes of backs, pounded the Cornell 'Varsity line for three-quarters of an hour this afternoon, but failed to score. The early workout was held in the baseball cage, where the players were forced to go owing to showers. In the last few minutes a forward pass was intercepted by Half Back Davis of the first team and he raced 40 yards for a score.

Paul Miller, 'Varsity guard of 1915 and 1916, will be out in togs with the opening of college. Another likely looking guard candidate reported today. He is P. O. Hoag, a 185-pound member of the freshman crew last season. Minor injuries have forced the lay-off of several of the 'Varsity backs for the past two days, but all the men are expected back in scrimmage before the end of the week.

Nichols to Lead Brown Eleven.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 25.—R. H. Nichols, '20, a guard, was elected captain of the Brown football eleven for the present season at a meeting held in the Brown Union tonight. Nichols's home is in Davisville, R. I.

Ice Rink Opens for Season.

The 181st Street Ice Skating Palace opened for the season last night. Joe Moore, metropolitan indoor champion, gave an interesting exhibition of speed skating which was well received by the big crowd.

ROPER PUTS TIGERS THROUGH HARD TEST

Two Elevens Are Picked by Princeton Coach and First Scrimmages Are Staged.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Sept. 25.—Football practice today was marked by the first scrimmage of the season when Bill Roper selected two teams and sent them through a short workout. He had announced that no work of this nature would be attempted until next week, and his change of plans as evidenced today came as a distinct surprise.

The early part of the afternoon was devoted to drilling the forwards, ends, and backs separately. Indications point to a heavy line, and every effort is being made to teach the men how to start quickly. The tackles, guards, and centres followed up the drill in falling on the ball by breaking through, blocking, and starting.

The large scound of ends was taken aside and drilled in taking out interference and in handling forward passes. Although he did not get into the scrimmage, Trimble, who played at halfback on the 1920 freshman team, was on the throwing end of the passes.

No record of downs or gains was kept in the scrimmage. Lourie, who captained Exeter two years ago and came here as a quarterback, was at right half on Team A, and Jack Strubing called the signals. Strubing was quarterback on the 1920 team. Garrity and De Stefano, both of whom were on last season's S. A. T. C. eleven, were at left half and full back, respectively.

Baker, another Exeter man, and Lamarche, a member of the 1919 freshmen eleven, took care of the wing positions. At the tackles were Hack McGraw, who had some experience on the 1916 'Varsity, and Parisette, a member of the 1915 'Varsity squad.

CHAMBER MUSIC GIVEN ON MOUNTAIN

Mrs. F. S. Coolidge's Berkshire Festival Begins Before Many Distinguished Musicians.

PLAY SECOND PRIZE SONATA

Louis Bailly and Harold Bauer Give Miss Rebecca Clarke's Work—Elgar's New Quartet Heard.

By RICHARD ALDRICH.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., Sept. 25.—The Berkshire festival of Chamber Music began its second annual session here this afternoon in the beautiful little Chamber Music Hall that the liberality and generous musical enthusiasm of Mrs. Frederick Shurtleff Coolidge have provided for it on South Mountain, overlooking the Berkshire Hills. Mrs. Coolidge is one of the increasing group of musical amateurs in this country who further the course of musical art in a princely way. She has founded the Berkshire String Quartet, which she maintains as Edward de Coppet of blessed memory founded and maintained his quartet.

She has also established an annual prize of $1,000 for a new composition in some form of chamber music. She carries on this festival as her own gift. She has built and given to Yale a beautiful building for the Musical Department, and these are far from exhausting the list of her good works for music and other deserving causes.

This chamber music festival is planned on an elaborate scale. Like most musical festivals, it offers a good deal at a time with five very solid concerts in three days. The Berkshire and Flonzaley Quartets play in alternate concert, there is a program of chamber music for wind instruments and another of vocal music. There is an evident intention to encourage contemporary musicians, American and foreign, and to keep the listeners abreast of what is doing in chamber music. The prize composition is given a prominent place. The programs for this year include a number of pieces that will be heard for the first time in this country and a number more that are new.

The little hall on the hill was filled this afternoon at the first concert. There were many distinguished musicians from various parts of the country and an audience otherwise of notable appreciation and understanding. And it may be said also that though to some a "chamber music festival" may seem a contradiction in terms, there was the vocal spirit that cannot be separated from the idea of chamber music.

The program today comprised Beethoven Quartet in A Minor, Opus 132; a Sonata for viola and piano, by Miss Rebecca Clarke, and Edward Elgar's new Quartet in E Minor, Opus 83. Miss Clarke's Sonata was one of the seventy-two manuscripts submitted for the prize and was the second in the estimation of the judges. It is a remarkable work as coming from a young woman unknown to the musical public, and shows unusual talent. It may be said that the talent is not wholly original, that it reveals strong influences of the modern French school, that the name of Debussy comes to the listener's mind involuntarily. Yet Miss Clarke had unquestionably something of her own to say, she is moved by a strong feeling for beauty, and much of her work is charming and really engrossing, especially the strongly motived first movement and the brilliant scherzo. Miss Clarke has written with uncommon skill for the viola, an instrument which she plays herself, and has made use of its most ingratiating qualities, while her writing for the piano is also singularly effective. The work was played with altogether remarkable skill and appreciation by Louis Bailly, the viola player of the Berkshire Quartet, and Harold Bauer.

Sir Edward Elgar has been willing to forget in writing this quartet that he has made part of his reputation as a master of the modern orchestra. The three movements are skillfully put upon the instruments, they "sound" with clarity and balance, and the writing is good quartet writing. Unfortunately, his ideas and his development of them are not, to put too fine a point upon it, commonplace. The first movement is singularly weak in these respects; the slow movement may be called "pleasing." The players, Messrs. Kortschak, Gordon, Bailly, and Stober, acquitted themselves admirably in both Beethoven's and Elgar's quartet. That by Beethoven is something to try the mettle of the most skillful hands in quartet playing, and it could hardly have been expected that this young organization should get to the very bottom of it.

TO PROBATE JUILLIARD WILL.

Threatened Court Action Is Withdrawn by Niece.

Special to The New York Times.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., Sept. 25.—There will be no contest of the will of Augustus D. Juilliard of New York and Tuxedo Park, owing to the fact that the attorneys for Mary Emma Fauve of Fort Wayne, Ind., filed with Surrogate Swezey at Goshen today a withdrawal of her objections. The Surrogate then signed the decree admitting the will to probate.

The reason given for the withdrawal of the contest is the fact that witnesses for the contestant are scattered over the country and cannot be obtained in time for the trial, which was set down for Oct. 6.

Under the terms of the will the contestant, who is a niece of the testator, receives the sum of $10,000 outright and the income from a trust fund of $100,000.

The will provides that the residue of the estate, estimated at over $5,000,000, be used to establish a Juilliard Musical Foundation in New York.

BURLESON WANTS TO QUIT.

President Said to Have Refused to Accept Resignation.

Special to The New York Times.

AUSTIN, Texas, Sept. 25.—The resignation of Albert S. Burleson as Postmaster General has been in the hands of President Wilson for several weeks, it was said today by an intimate friend of Mr. Burleson.

Mr. Burleson offered his resignation, this man said, immediately following the attack upon him by Samuel Gompers, writing he preferred to quit rather than submit to any interference by Mr. Gompers.

President Wilson has declined to accept the resignation.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—Warm congratulations for his services and regret at his departure are expressed by Secretary of the Navy Daniels in a letter to Admiral William S. Benson, the Chief of Operations, who is retiring from the navy after almost fifty years of service.

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 25.—The program of arrangements for the visit to Yale University on Oct. 2 of Cardinal Mercier was completed by the university Secretary's office and announced today. The distinguished visitor will receive the degree of Doctor of Laws. This will be at special convocation, the second in a quarter of a century, the other recipient being Lord Kelvin, scientist, fifteen years ago.

PLEA FOR JEWISH ORPHANS.

Government Asked to Permit Thousands of War Waifs to Come Here.

The Department of State has been asked by the Jewish People's Relief Committee, with headquarters here, to permit the thousands of Jewish children in Europe made orphans as a result of the world war to enter this country, that they may be placed in private homes and institutions, it was announced yesterday. The committee made public a letter sent to Secretary of State Lansing by Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, calling attention to the plight of the children.

Mr. Gompers' interest in the orphans was aroused by a letter from Alexander Kahn, Chairman of the committee, who informed him of the plan. He told the labor leader that "no less than 150,000 Jewish orphans are scattered in the Eastern front regions and that at least 20 per cent. are without either parent." "Children have died and are dying in tens of thousands," he also asserted.

These fact were communicated to Mr. Lansing by Mr. Gompers, who said he felt "impelled as a duty to lay the whole matter before you." The reply of the State Department has not been received.

Hundreds of individuals have pledged themselves to adopt the children and provide for their education if they come to this country.

Attorney States $15,000 Bail Furnished Coming Here from Prison.

Harry Weinberger of 261 Broadway, attorney for Emma Goldman and Alexander Berkman, yesterday issued the following statement:

"Emma Goldman, whose term of imprisonment at Jefferson City Prison, Jefferson, Mo., expires on Sept. 27, and whose arrest has been ordered by the Commissioner General of Immigration for deportation, will be released on $15,000 bail.

"Liberty bonds to the amount of $15,000 were sent by express last night by her attorney Harry Weinberger to the Commissioner General at Washington, D. C., for bail.

"Miss Goldman will therefore not be arrested and will proceed directly to New York from Jefferson City with her niece, Stella Ballantine.

"In the case of Alexander Berkman, whose term expires on Oct. 3, bail will not be produced until he arrives under arrest in the City of New York, at which time Liberty bonds to the amount of $15,000 will also be deposited for him. Mr. Weinberger will leave for Atlanta, where Alexander Berkman is confined in the United States Penitentiary, on Saturday night. Berkman is to be brought to Ellis Island by an agent of the Department of Immigration, and Mr. Weinberger will accompany them."

Eddie Leonard came back to town last evening in a piece called "Roly Boly Eyes," when there was launched at the Knickerbocker Theatre the somewhat dubious experiment of spreading that ever popular stalwart of minstrelsy into an all-evening's entertainment. Eddie Leonard singing "Ida" again, Eddie Leonard going back to his old favorite, "Ro-holy Bo-holy Ah-ah-ah-ah-eyes," Eddie Leonard dancing softly and easily his wonderful steps, Eddie Leonard and not much else.

There were others in the cast, notably the sprite-like Queenie Smith from the Metropolitan, who can dance better than she can sing, and who, therefore, sang much more than she danced; a nimble pair of dancers who ought never be allowed to sing at all; and our old friend, May Boley, who has grown very roly indeed these latter years. She sings a song which has the cryptic refrain:

"Dearie! All washed up! Apple sauce!"

It was not known what it all meant. Indeed, the book, by Edgar Allan Wolff, seemed the most humorless musical comedy libretto of all time. Probably that is not true. Probably there have been worse ones. But anyway, that is the way it seemed. The climax is reached when a widow serving her third hitch (played by the most strident-voiced actress of recent memory) exclaims:

"You remind me so much of my third husband. I used to call him the Matador."

"Why did you used to call him the Matador?"

"I used to call him the Matador because he was so good at throwing the bull."

Laughter.

But there is a lot of pleasant close harmony in Mr. Leonard's company and some uncommonly good ensemble singing. Then he himself is an agreeable person, and is known from coast to coast even by people who have never seen or heard him in all their days. Like ..... Lauder, Eddie Foy, and George M. Cohan, he is so easy to imitate that all the mimics of vaudeville have been doing it for years. So there arose, even amid the plaudits of an obviously friendly audience, the feeling that whereas "Roly Boly Eyes" might not long survive the Broadway competition, there would be a welcome for it up and down that highway known as the road. Of course, it is the people from that highway who largely crowd our theatres from August to June, but somehow, when they come here, they expect more than they ever will get in "Roly Boly Eyes."

OPERATORS TO FIGHT DEMANDS OF MINERS

Will Insist That Present Wage Scale Agreement Is in Effect Until April, 1920.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 25.—The first response of the soft coal operators to the demands of the United Mine Workers of America for a new wage scale, effective Nov. 1, with the alternative of a general strike on that date, will be based on the argument that the present Washington wage agreements run for the duration of the war, or until April 1, 1920, if the war be not ended by that time, and that there is, therefore, no reason to put a new scale into effect Nov. 1.

This much was evident from preliminary remarks of coal operators gathered here for the joint wage scale conference with representaives of the miners from the four districts of Ohio, Illinois, Indiana and Western Pennsylvania, constituting the central competitive field, although their spokesmen steadfastly refrained from showing their hands regarding the attitude to be taken on the general demands for the 60 per cent. wage increase, six-hour day, five-day week and other conditions formulated at the Cleveland convention of the mine workers.

The operators spent the entire day in caucus, discussing the policy to be adopted in the face of the miners' program, selecting their representatives on the joint scale committee and other committees and other preliminary work of organization. For this reason the joint conference did not get under way today. The initial meeting was, instead, postponed until tomorrow.

Thomas J. Brewster of St. Louis, one of the Illinois operators, who was selected as Chairman of the operators' delegation and also official spokesman for the mine owners, said after the caucus that the operators would be ready with a prompt answer to the demand of the miners, but inasmuch as they had as yet no official cognizance of the Cleveland program they had decided to give no preliminary statement of their attitude as to any one of its particular points.

Other operators, however, indicated that they considered the demands excessive, and the situation as very grave. They looked for an agreement only after protracted negotiations, if at all. It was suggested that, in view of the wide differences between the miners' conditions and what the operators consider possible to grant, it would be well, should the first exchange of views result in no agreement, to adjourn the conference until after President Wilson's round-table conference in October, in the hope that this may work out some formula on which a specific settlement in the coal industry might be arranged.

Knights of C. Cares for Soldiers' Graves.

All graves of American soldiers in the cemetery at Romagne-en-Argonne, where more than 17,000 are buried, have been decorated with flowers and sodded for the Winter by the Knights of Columbus, according to an announcement made yesterday. The work, which has been done by 100 K. of C. secretaries on duty with the Salvage Corps, was hastened so as to have the graves a mass of flowers today, the first anniversary of the Meuse-Marne offensive in which thousands of American boys fell.

THE WORLD'S HOPE OF MERCY AND OF PEACE.

From the President's Speech at Salt Lake City.

Let us go into particulars, therefore. These gentlemen say: "We do not want the United States drawn into every little European squabble." Why, of course we do not, and under the League of Nations it is entirely within our choice whether we will be or not. The normal processes of the action of the League are certainly to be this: When trouble arises in the Balkans, when somebody sets up a fire somewhere in Central Europe among those little nations which are, for the time being, looking upon one another with a good deal of jealousy and suspicion because the passions of the world have not cooled—whenever that happens, the Council of the League will confer as to the best method of putting out the fire.

If you want to put out a fire in the Balkans, if you want to stamp out the smoldering flame in some part of Central Europe, you do not send to the United States for troops. The Council of the League selects the Powers which are most ready, most available, most suitable, and selects them only at their own consent, so that the United States would in no such circumstances conceivably be drawn in, unless the flame spread to the world. And would they then be left out, even if they were not members of the League? You have seen the fire spread to the world once, and did not you go in? If you saw it spread again, if you saw human liberty again imperiled, would you wait to be a member of the League to go in?

Why, the whole thing goes directly to the conscience of the nation. If the fight is big enough to draw the United States in, I predict that they will be drawn in anyhow; and if it is not big enough to bring them in inevitably, they can go in or stay out according to our own decision. Why are these gentlemen afraid? There is no force to oblige the United States to do anything except moral force. Is any man, any proud American, afraid that the United States will resist the duress of duty? • • •

There is no necessity for the last part of this reservation. Everybody in the world knows, and I say that advisedly—I mean every public man, every statesman in the world knows—that in order that the United States should go to war it is necessary for the Congress to act. They do not have to be told that, but that is not what this resolution says. This resolution says the United States assumes no obligation under the provisions of Article X. to preserve the territorial integrity or political independence of any other country—washes its hands of the whole business. • • •

In other words, that is an absolute withdrawal of the obligations of Article X., and that is why I say that it would be a rejection of the Covenant and thereby a rejection of the Treaty, for the Treaty cannot be executed without the Covenant.

Much time has passed since the Treaty was submitted to the Senate, much thought and speech has been devoted to it. There has been some display of passion, some ill-considered utterances that, we are sure, have not brought agreement and decision any nearer. The President, in some of his earlier speeches, referred to the opposing Senators in terms that, when he recalled them, he must have regretted as sincerely as his countrymen did; and Senator NEW said in the debate yesterday that he would regard it as treason to vote for the Treaty without the reservations reported by the Foreign Relations Committee. Inasmuch as ex-President TAFT has publicly declared that, while certain reservations might be accepted, if he were a Senator he would vote to ratify the Treaty without change or reservation, we must conclude that the Indiana Senator had not duly considered all the implications of the words he used. We hope the time has passed for extreme and passionate discourse on either side, that the people and the Senate, putting all that aside, will soberly try to understand the Treaty and the Covenant, to get rid of error, and to see with clear vision what would be the situation of the nations of the world and of the United States with the Treaty and the League, and what it would be without them.

Study and discussion have cleared the air of much misconception, have disposed of many if not most of the objections urged against the Treaty. Senator JOHNSON'S amendment cannot prevail, we judge, since he was informed yesterday that eight Republicans would vote against it. It has been demonstrated, we think, that votes in the Assembly were given to Great Britain's self-governing possessions for sound and unassailable reasons, and that the unanimity required for elections to the Council and for action by the Council securely protects the United States and other nations against this apparent preponderance. Our Monroe Doctrine and our sovereign right to determine for ourselves all domestic questions are amply guaranteed against infringement, and those subjects have practically disappeared from the discussion. There remains Article X., regarding the undertaking to defend nations against external aggression. That is now the chief, if not the only, remaining bone of contention.

To the end that the light of understanding and of reason may be thrown upon this main point of difference we reprint, at the head of this article, a part of Mr. WILSON'S speech at Salt Lake City in which he demonstrated beyond question or cavil, it seems to us, that our Congress must give its assent and authorization before this nation can take part in any war. That is what Article X. means; if it meant otherwise it would be void of all effect. Can we not, then, indulge the hope that with returning calmness of view, made evident by the Republican opposition to the Johnson amendment, the whole question of the Treaty and the League will now be reconsidered, without partisanship or passion, with minds open to a more candid consideration of the priceless benefits which the immediate coming of peace and the realization of the prayers and purposes of the founders of the League would confer upon the nations and upon humanity?

It is the greatest work of mercy ever undertaken by man. Our whole history, the spirit of our people, have predisposed our fellow-men in other lands to the belief that upon a question of that unequaled moment the decision of the United States would not for a single day remain in doubt. Shall we, can we, forfeit their confidence?

A SURPRISING CHOICE.

The navy has been waiting with solicitude for the announcement of the name of the officer who is to be Chief of Naval Operations, hoping for the best. Disappointment that the choice of Secretary DANIELS has fallen upon Rear Admiral ROBERT E. COONTZ, and not upon a graduate of the Naval War College, is felt throughout the service. The Senate, whose approval of the appointment is necessary, should inquire into the qualifications of Admiral COONTZ for this important office.

It is vital that the Chief of Naval Operations should be somewhere near the top of his profession, equipped at all points to keep the navy at a high standard of efficiency and in the forefront of progress. He should be looked up to in the service as a man of ideas and initiative. His authority is great, his powers are wide. He should have the mind of a strategist. He should be a born organizer, a chief of infinite resources. Nothing should escape him in the field of invention, and he should know the value of all the potentialities of warfare at sea. In his hands are the wires that control many functions essential to success. If he is not well informed, alert, and vigilant, and above all practical, the navy will not be ready for war when it comes. His relations with the War College should be intimate, and he should thoroughly understand its aims and purposes. He is the source of knowledge upon which the Secretary draws to direct the operations of the navy. The combination of an easy-going Secretary and an adviser not of the highest competence would be unfortunate and might prove calamitous.

Admiral COONTZ'S record, while respectable, is not reassuring. He served six years on the Alaskan station, becoming proficient as a pilot in Alaskan seas. In the voyage of the fleet around the world he was executive officer on the battleship Nebraska. For two years, 1912 and 1913, he acted as Governor of Guam, a post not conducive to development. Later he commanded the battleship Georgia, and during this detail she won the trophy for gunnery. Just before the entrance of the United States into the war the Admiral was Commandant of the Puget Sound Navy Yard. Recently he has had a division of the Pacific Fleet. There is no doubt that Admiral COONTZ is a competent naval officer, although he has not won any marked distinction in his profession. But is he qualified for the difficult tasks and responsible duties of the Chief of Naval Operations? He holds no diploma from the Naval War College. The service is surprised to learn that the Secretary has not appointed an officer from the list of graduates, which includes the most accomplished Admirals in the navy. This is singular, because Mr. DANIELS has often praised the War College to the skies and has apparently understood how indispensable it is to the creation of a strong navy.

Admiral WILLIAM S. SIMS and Admiral HENRY T. MAYO, the one commander of the United States Fleet in European waters during the war and the other commander of the Atlantic Fleet, would be subordinate to Admiral COONTZ if he should become Chief of Naval Operations. The impression throughout the navy is that Secretary DANIELS has not made the best choice for the position, and the best is none too good for the service. It becomes the duty of the Senate to inquire why he has preferred Admiral COONTZ.

MR. FITZPATRICK GIVES GROUND.

Clarification of the disputed issues in the steel strike has come unexpectedly soon. Mr. FITZPATRICK, before the Senate committee, admitted that he and his associates represented only one-fifth of the steel workers when they attempted, on the plea that they spoke for a majority, to blockade the key industry of the nation. A strike, then, for "recognition of the union" was a strike for recognition of the right of one-fifth of the workers to cajole or coerce a passive or unwilling four-fifths into a course for which they had no appetite.

The progress of the strike bears out the interpretation which is compelled by Mr. FITZPATRICK'S admission. The number of men who quit work was never decisive; and from steel mills the country over comes the news that men who went out the first day have been coming back. Mr. FITZPATRICK'S demand for arbitration, in these circumstances, is more than a strategic retreat to previously prepared positions; it is an attempt to use the Government as an instrument for obtaining peace by negotiation before he is defeated in the field.

Judge GARY says that "questions of moral principle cannot be arbitrated nor compromised," and that such questions are involved in this strike. The question at issue appears to be the right of Mr. FITZPATRICK and Mr. FOSTER and their 20 per cent. to dictate the conditions of employment of the other 80 per cent., as well as to order the affairs of the employers and the public. That does indeed have the appearance of a moral issue; and none should see that more readily than the non-union 80 per cent., whom, as Judge GARY says, Mr. FITZPATRICK and his associates "have volunteered to represent."

MR. FRELINGHUYSEN'S SPEECH.

Senator FRELINGHUYSEN advances a curious theory about our system of government. Saying that he is a man of Revolutionary ancestry, he nevertheless proposes that our national policies should be governed by the hyphen. He holds to the belief that whenever Germans, Frenchmen, Italians, Irishmen, or people from any other nation disagree with the majority it will become a case where the majority must yield.

His argument is that under the League of Nations at some time in the future we might become involved in a dispute in which, say, Italy might take a different view from ours. We must think, then, of what our Italian fellow-citizens might say. Was not that question tried out in the late war? Did not some German-Americans try to raise that question? What was the answer? It was an appeal to German-born men to remember that they were Americans. The men of German ancestry who, in our armies, got the Medal of Honor, the D. S. C., the Croix de Guerre, and other decorations are the sufficient answer to that question. If any question again arises which may create doubts of the loyalty of American citizens, whether in racial origin they are Italian, Frenchmen, Jugoslavs, or what not, the same question will be asked of them and the same answer will be given.

Senator FRELINGHUYSEN is certainly wrong. He does not know what elements compose the United States today. He thinks that we might shrink before an Italian-American vote or an Irish-American vote or a German-American vote. We shrink from no such thing. We have tested the loyalty of these men, and it will take more than a speech by a Senator disposed to yield to the worst elements among them to convince us, the great body of American citizens, that in every step we take we are bound to face the possibility of a rebellion by men who have proved their loyalty over and over again.

TAXES AND CITY WAGES.

The city is to increase the real estate valuations which are the basis of taxes, and the proceeds are to be devoted in part to the increase of the pay of its employés. It might be wished that there were more examples of that manner of laying taxes for specific uses. It is a reinforcement to the increase of railway rates as a means of increasing railway wages, as a contribution to the education of the public toward appreciation of the fact that governments have no resources of their own, and must take from some what they pay to others. In some cases that might stop the finding of the funds for the proposed purposes, but not in this case. The employés of the city have a case for assistance toward the high cost of living, and they have pressed their claims in a manner calling for sympathetic action. Besides, there is all the difference in the world between the increase of valuations this year and the much larger increases which were made for the purpose of making the construction of the dual subway possible.

The increases in Mayor GAYNOR'S time came when the landlords were seeking tenants, and were offering them all sorts of concessions to fill their empty and deteriorating premises. Now tenants are seeking landlords, so thoroughly have the subways and other conditions redressed conditions in favor of the landlords. The additions now to the tax valuations are recognitions of previous additions to market values, and it is an unfortunate landlord who cannot either sell his property or collect his increased taxes from his choice of tenants. The increase of tax values is anything but a check to rent profiteering. It is rather an excuse, or even justification, and may perhaps start another vicious circle of increases, each dependent on the other. Sympathy now is rather with the rentpayers, and yet they, too, have their recompenses. It is well that it should be brought home to them that the expenses of the city are the concern of them as well as of the landlords, and that the service to the public which deserves these increased wages is to their benefit as well as that of the landlords; and there are among them few indeed whose income has not been increased more than that of the city workers. Mayor HYLAN has so many troubles that it will ease his burden to know that the increase of tax values is both more reasonable than usual and is justified by its uses, even though he now never can realize his boasts of economies in administration.

COLLEGE RECONSTRUCTION.

Now it is the colleges that are entering upon their "period of reconstruction." They are the sources of our future light and leading, and the spirit in which they take up the task has an import unusually far-reaching. "I call upon you young men and teachers," said Chancellor BROWN at the opening of New York University, "to enter with me into the "solemn vow that our life shall be "lived for our country and for man-"kind, no less than was the life of "those who gave themselves in the "supreme devotion of that War of "Liberation." That is the call which, as we once thought, all the world would heed; but even these first months since the armistice have brought a rude disillusionment. There are times when the world seems not only "again what it was," but infinitely more blinded by self-interest and irresponsibility. The Chancellor seems aware of a danger. The vow he proposes means "that you turn your "backs on even your best of other "days, that you put all sordidness "and all cheap bargaining behind "you, that you put frivolity and "snobbery and arrogance behind you, "that you put and keep the life on "this campus on such a plane that "it shall compel the respect and ad-"miration of all right-thinking men."

Is this counsel too difficult? Chancellor BROWN seems to fear that it is. "The sense of fun is strong in men "and I cannot help putting this ap-"peal alongside of a college dance, a "college election, a dormitory or a "fraternity, or a car full of student "commuters. I cannot help seeing "how ingloriously the most heroic ut-"terance will be laughed down by "the triumphant actualities of the "situation." There, in a word, is the crux of the problem. For our soldiers in France the "actuality" of the situation was the dull roar of the German guns; for the rest of us it was the increasing toll of the submarine and the spectre of starvation, which meant defeat. Today the nearer actuality presses upon us—an actuality which is smaller, more personal. There are times when the rest of the world seems to have surrendered to it, to have embraced it again with a fondness which the years of heroic struggle have only enhanced.

The defect, obviously, is a defect of imagination. The "War of Liberation" brought responsibilities that were imminent, inescapable; with the Hun pressing down on us we felt vividly enough the defects of our republican slackness that had made his early triumphs possible. But in victory we easily forget the narrowness of the margin by which we escaped; in "the imminent actualities" of the old familiar life of peace the far horizon is clouded. Who shall keep the vision alive and present among us if not our colleges and universities? The men in them have years of leisure in which to think of the things that lie beyond the present actuality—years of youth when passions burn warm and thought is edged with fire. They are forming the habits of mind which will give substance and direction to their whole lives. In France, even when the pressure was strongest, men in the trenches found courage to laugh; the men behind the lines found strength for sport and jest. Is it too much to expect that in times of peace we shall remember, beneath our happier "actualities," the great task which they gave us to be fulfilled?

These are the thoughts that confront every school and college and university throughout the land. At Columbia, Professor JOHN ERSKINE pointed out, in his opening address, that the war was won by intellect, and that it indicated once again the supremacy of the man who is rightly trained. Out of the seeming chaos of the present there is still hope that our institutions of learning are opening their doors upon a future of genuine reconstruction.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Production Follows Prevention.

Throughout by far the greater part of medical history, what the doctors did—or attempted to do—is sufficiently indicated by the fact that they were content, and even proud, to call theirs "the healing art." Their ambition, that is, was to cure the sick and to mend the mutilated. Their predecessors, the magicians, did, indeed, claim the power to ward off disease, as well as to drive it away after it had come, but when, and wherever, faith in spells and charms disappeared, the practitioners of medicine thought their duty accomplished when they utilized such curative means and measures as they knew.

They had their reward and earned it. Then came "preventive medicine," demanding in recent years recognition as more important than the merely curative, and getting it, too, from the more enlightened part of both the medical profession and the public, but not yet making more than a good beginning in the achievement of its promised wonders.

Now a new phrase is coming into use—"productive medicine." Its employment shows that there are doctors who look beyond both the curing and preventing of disease, and count among the possibilities of their art, and the very highest of them, that of doing something for men and women who are neither ill nor threatened with illness.

An Opportunity Provided by the War.

Indicative of the importance that should be ascribed the later development in medicine just noted is the fact that "Productive Medicine" was the subject of the address made by Dr. WILLIAM DARRACH, the newly appointed Dean of the New York College of Physicians and Surgeons, in opening the new year of that admirable institution.

Just returned from service as an army surgeon in France, it was inevitable that Dr. DARRACH would tell his hearers something of what his corps had done, and it was significant that he emphasized, as he did, not the prevention of disease among the men in the army or the marvels of surgery effected for the benefit of the wounded, but the physical improvement to be seen among the returned soldiers. That improvement, it should be remembered, was not in the health of weaklings and invalids, but in that of men whose physical condition at the time of enrollment had been such as to meet the test of stern military examiners. Hard as were the strains of war, he said, the American troops have come home weighing, on the average, ten pounds more than they did when they entered the army, while what they learned in the camps of sanitation, hygiene, and right living will make every one of them, when he returns to civilian life, himself an instructor of his friends and neighbors as well as a practitioner of his new knowledge.

That is one phase of "productive medicine." The war did not create it, but the war did provide a wonderful opportunity for the illustration of what it can do.

Americanizing as Done for Soldiers.

Closely related to what Dr. DARRACH called "productive medicine" is the work that has been done for American soldiers here at home by the organization known as the War Camp Community Service. New York has recently had a chance to see what the results of that work are, for they were exhibited by a detachment of twenty-eight men who had been subjected to it at Camp Upton by Lieut. Col. BERNARD T. LENTZ and his associated officers. When these men entered the army—all of them since May 1 of this year—only one of them could speak English, and he, as well as all the rest, was unable to read or write any language. And they represented fourteen nationalities, as concerned descent. Thanks to the teaching they have received, not only have they become alert, well-trained soldiers, so far as camp training makes soldiers, but they have all passed forever from the illiterate and inarticulate classes. In other words, they have been qualified for the performance of military duty in case of need—which is much—but even more is their present increased qualification for citizenship. They have been saved from the "foreign colony," with all its evils, for on quitting the army at the end of their enlistments they can take an equal place among their neighbors.

That their "Americanization" is complete hardly would be claimed, but certainly it is well begun and considerably advanced. Therefore is the work of the War Camp Community Service highly commendable. It ought to make even the pacifists at least suspect that there are forms and phases of "militarism" at which they need not shudder.

Interference Sometimes Is Desirable.

It would be desirable to hear from the WILLIAM Z. FOSTER who is just now so frequently mentioned and quoted in the news dispatches exactly what he means when he protests against what he calls "the interference with the strikers" of the men whom he calls "Cossacks." The explanation he does give is that the Pennsylvania State Police—the "Cossacks" of his vivid imagination—ride about towns and villages, assaulting with club and pistol honest workers engaged in the peaceful exercise of rights both natural and constitutional.

But the Pennsylvania State Police has a history and a record. Its members never have done in the past the things charged by Mr. FOSTER, and the difficulty in the way of believing that they are doing those things now is inadequately described by any word smaller than "insuperable." The Governor of Pennsylvania evidently is of that opinion, for in writing to Mr. FOSTER he ignored the accusations against the troopers, commended them for the efficient performance of their accustomed duty of supporting the constituted authorities, and promised them whatever help they needed from the other forces of the State.

Yet Mr. FOSTER is right, too—that the constables have "interfered" with some of the strikers is true. But Governor SPROUL'S defense of the interference is more explicit than Mr. FOSTER'S denunciation of it.

A Canadian Protest.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Surely Senators Johnson, Borah, and Lodge must be aware that it is an untruth to state that "Great Britain" is given six votes in the League against one for the United States. If these Senators do not know that this section of the British Empire has independent interests and opinions it is time they resigned and allowed more informed men to represent their country.

Frankly speaking, many here look askance at Americans as insincere. We are very close neighbors and it will be happier for both peoples if sympathy is established between us. A League of Nations would be of sentimental value to both the United States and Canada.

GERMAN GAINS.

Riddance of Hohenzollerns and Increased Productivity Clear Profit.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There is considerable difference of opinion as to what won the war, whether it was the American Army, the British Navy, the stand of the French at the Marne and Verdun, the Allied propaganda, German mistakes, or some other factor; but there is no doubt as to which side won the war, and any one who implied that there was would probably be classed as a lunatic or a traitor.

Notwithstanding this, I am strongly of the opinion that the Germans were the victors, and that, of all the coalition against Germany, the United States has derived the least profit and the greatest damage.

I do not say this because I am a pro-German, or because I am one of those who oppose the League of Nations from European prejudices or a lack of culture which identifies Americanism with provincialism, but I say it because a dispassionate consideration of the effects of the war already apparent leads me to this conclusion.

Consider these effects briefly: The Germans have got rid of the Hohenzollerns, Ludendorff, Von Tirpitz, Hindenburg, and to a certain extent of the prejudices and institutions they represented. They have lost some of their intolerable arrogance and conceit; they have had their faith shaken in the omniscience of their pedantic and purblind professors, who energized the German tendency to dream by a fanatical worship of nationality and materialism and so made themselves infinitely more absolute and dangerous tyrants than the Mahdis and other zealots who have led Eastern races to destruction behind a superstition more obvious but less insidious.

These things alone would well justify the losses Germany has incurred as a result of the war, but apparently the nation's gains have not all been negative. On every hand we read of the German workman returning to his task and insisting on longer rather than shorter hours. It would seem that the German laborer realizes that his only salvation lies in increased production, and if this is the case all the economic handicaps imposed by the peace of Versailles will be inadequate to throttle German competition; for what will countries in which labor is 30 per cent. efficient at a high wage have against one in which it is over 100 per cent. efficient at a lower rate of pay? I don't mean to assert that the German workman is individually more skilful or effective than his allied competitor, but he certainly will be more so collectively if this spirit imbues him while we have discontent and disorder everywhere reducing the quantity and quality of our production.

This aspect of the war's effects has received very little attention, and yet it deserves much, for it means that, in the economic conflict that is to follow the military struggle, just concluded, the moral forces will be on the side of the Germans, who will be exemplifying industry and co-operation while the victorious nations, with the United States foremost among them, will be dissipating energy and destroying effectiveness by industrial insubordination and indulgence that are almost as much of a menace to civilization as was Kaiserism and militarism.

John Hay and the Senate.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I suggest that John Hay's opinion of the Senate as a part of the treaty-making power would perhaps furnish material for an interesting editorial or even for a special article at this time?

For example, I quote from a letter to be found on page 374 of "The Education of Henry Adams":

"A treaty of peace, in any normal state of things, ought to be ratified with unanimity in twenty-four hours. They wasted six weeks in wrangling over this one, and ratified it with one vote to spare. We have five or six matters now demanding settlement. I can settle them all, honorably and advantageously to our own side; and I am assured by leading men in the Senate that not one of these treaties, if negotiated, will pass the Senate. I should have a majority in every case, but a malcontent third would certainly dish every one of them. To such monstrous shape has the original mistake of the Constitution grown in the evolution of our politics."

In the same volume, pages 281, 262, 422, and 423, appear other interesting quotations from Hay.

In Thayer's "The Life of John Hay" there are interesting quotations, notably on pages 170, 216, 219, 220, 223, 225-226, 273, 274, and 392.

In the light of those passages one doubts whether anything could be more diverting, could we but have it, than John Hay on the antics of his friend, Senator Lodge, in dealing with the treaty of peace.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A very observant individual recently commented to the writer on the fact that soldier boys at the hospitals who are wounded in the leg have in nearly nine cases out of ten received wounds in the left leg.

This seems a curious coincidence in offering food for thought to the psychologist. The writer wonders if this is due to the fact that practically nine out of ten boys are right-handed and, therefore, in standing in position to fire rifles or pistols, as the case may be, would advance the left foot, thereby bringing this foot into the danger zone and hence occasion the greater percentage of wounds in such limb.

If this be true, it might serve as the basis for consideration by army strategists in devising a separate form of armored protection for the left or right leg, dependent upon whether the individual were right or left handed, so as to offer increased form of protection for whichever leg would be advanced while firing.

In any event there is food for thought in this strange fact and the incident is set forth for whatever value it may have.

A KING'S CLOAK.

Albert, young liegeman, unto Freedom spoke:
"Lo, there is mire before your steps, my Queen!
I spread, that you may pass, my 'broidered cloak—
My field of Flanders!" History has seen
How that cloak, patterned with its poppies red,
Was with the blood of wounded heroes mired,
Its old design stained deeper by the dead,
And how that courtier's deed the world's heart fired.

Raleigh of Flanders—Albert, King and knight—
The glass of chivalry—to earth a sign—
Whose name forever floods the heart with light—
Wear, then, that cloak, marked now by steps divine,
As decoration from the hand of God:
Your Flanders field, where Freedom walked, dry-shod!

Dr. Burgess Explains Scope of Episcopal Church Program.

The following statement was made yesterday by the Rev. Thomas Burgess, Secretary of the Department of Christian Americanization of the Board of Missions of the Episcopal Church:

"It was with astonishment and regret that I read in yesterday's papers the expressed indignation of President Leo Lerner of the Hebrew National Orphan House in connection with statements reported to have been made by Episcopal churchmen at Tuesday's conference to consider the Church's proposed program of Christian Americanization, and in connection with the program itself.

"If his conception of the aims of the Church's Department of Christian Americanization and of its program were correct I could understand indignation on the part of all loyal and religious Jews. But it seems to me that President Lerner's indignation is not justified by the facts.

"It was never stated, at Tuesday's conference, that 'the Jews as a race are in need of Americanization.' The war record of the Jews is an inspiring chapter in the history of American patriotism. All of us realized and discussed at this meeting the intense loyalty, and, in many instances, the patriotic leadership of Americans of the Hebrew faith. We honor the memory of those thousands of Jewish boys who gave their lives in the world war. We know how splendidly the Jews at home sacrificed their worldly goods at the call of the nation that the victory might be won.

"It is not the purpose of the program to Americanize the Jews. The program is not one of Americanization alone. It is a program of Christian Americanization, based upon the firm belief of the Church that true citizenship must be founded upon religion. It has to do with the foreign-born and their children in this country. Above all with those who have become unchurched. And it deals not with one race, but with all races. Certainly the foreign-born Jews were not singled out. They are but a small part of the program.

"It is estimated that fully one-half of the Jewish people in the United States are foreign-born. Any religious Jew will admit that there is a large number of Jews who have left the faith of their fathers, and whom the synagogues do not and cannot reach. It is with these very special classes of the Jewish race that the Christian Americanization program of the Church primarily has to do.

"The program, therefore, is not general, in so far as it applies to the Jews. It does not propose the Americanization of the Jews as a race. It does propose the thorough Americanization of the foreign-born Jews and their children who have not grasped what real Americanism is. It does propose to make religious those who have lost all faith in God, that God who is the God of the Jews and the Christian alike.

"The entire program, which is purely tentative, provides for an expenditure of approximately $1,000,000, so that the Episcopal Church may co-operate with all Government, voluntary and religious organizations in making American citizens of those who were born in foreign countries. Of this sum little more than one-tenth has been devoted to the problem of the foreign-born, the unchurched Jews.

"The specific projects include the erection of one community house for Jews in one of our large cities, as a large attempt to meet a real need, and smaller work elsewhere. Similar plans have been made by other churches. The Jews themselves, those Jews who are part of our national fibre, have undertaken Americanization projects. Our work is planned to be in co-operation with theirs, in co-operation with the work of all religious and secular agencies and co-operation with the Government. In this period of crisis there cannot be too much done in the business of Americanization if American civilization is to be preserved.

"This, then, is the truth about the proposed Episcopal program of Christian Americanization as it relates to the Jews. These were the major points discussed at the conference of Tuesday. And if the churchmen who discussed them realized the need of the foreign-born Jews for an interpretation of the ideals of American citizenship, if they realized the need of the unchurched Jews for a religious foundation upon which their citizenship may rest, they realized as well and spoke with appreciation of the value of the Jew as a citizen, and the fine Americanism of the thousands of Jews in this country, born and reared here, who are citizens."

DENY PROSELYTING.

Pennsylvania Episcopalians Reply to Jewish Statement.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 25.—Bishop Thomas J. Garland and the Rev. John I. Zacker of the Episcopal Diocese of Pennsylvania today answered statements of New York Jews that the Episcopal Church sought to Christianize Jews in this country.

The statements were made at a meeting of prominent Jews in New York yesterday as a protest to a published statement that a $1,000,000 fund of the Episcopal Church was to be used in part to "Americanize Jews."

Bishop Garland said the facts had been misconstrued. "The Episcopal Church," he said, "does not make any distinction in its program for the Christianization and Americanization of immigrants. We include in that program all foreigners."

Dr. Zacker, Episcopal missionary to the Jews, said the controversy is due to misquoting of speakers at the recent conference of Christian workers in New York.

TAX LAWS TO STAND, PENROSE DECLARES

General Revenue Legislation to be Delayed for Next Congress, He Says.

WAITS SETTLED CONDITIONS

"Porgun" Tariff Bills Covering Duties on Special Commodities Are Deprecated.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—There will be no revision of the tariff or repeal of the present revenue law by this Congress, in the opinion of Senator Penrose, Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, who said today that the excess profits and other complicated taxes would not be revised or general revenue legislation undertaken until the next Administration.

"It is not likely that the question of general tariff revision will come up until after the next Presidential election," said Mr. Penrose. "The world is still upset and commercial and industrial conditions are so disturbed and involved that it would be very difficult if not impossible to make proper tariff schedules. The state of foreign exchange renders international trade difficult, and in cases impossible. Foreign countries are adopting embargoes and other import regulations by licenses and otherwise, for their own particular advantage.

"The English Government, it has been reported, has recently placed an export duty on skins sent from England to the colonies, which if true, will seriously embarrass the leather industry of the United States.

"Nearly all the protective tariff publicity agencies, such as the Protective Tariff League and the Home Market Club of Boston, oppose tariff revision at this time. Similar views have been generally expressed by business men all over the country in written communications.

"An effort has been made to secure the passage of a few so-called 'popgun' tariff bills through the House of Representatives, and these bills are now pending in the Senate Finance Committee. Generally speaking, the members of the committee are not enthusiastic concerning this kind of piecemeal legislation. There is a bill to impose duties on laboratory glass, porcelain ware, optical glass and scientific instruments; another bill to provide a duty on tungsten ores; still another for a duty on zinc ores, and finally a bill to impose a duty on pearl shells.

"In a case of a general invasion of the American market by a revival of international trade, these bills would fail of their purpose because the industry of the country would be prostrated and the market would cease for the time being for these articles. In some cases these bills fail to pay any attention to the necessity of compensatory duties on articles connected with the production of these manufactured and raw materials.

"There are also a number of amendments to the Revenue act repealing certain taxes. Should these bills, already passed by the House, be accepted by the Senate, doubtless a flood of similar amendments would come along for the elimination of other taxes. Several million dollars would be swept aside in a very short time. These bills will be examined very carefully by the committee before final action is taken.

"There is, of course, a general admission that the present revenue law is full of defects and hardships and many oppressive features of great magnitude. Some of these defects will lead to a strangling of industrial enterprise unless corrected. For instance, the excess profits tax is complicated and burdensome. I stated when the Revenue bill was passed that oppressive and objectionable taxes were in the bill and should be eliminated at the earliest possible moment.

"Many other objectionable features might be mentioned. The fact of the matter is that the present law was framed under the stress of war and it is reasonable to suppose that another would be laid on more logical and conservative lines.

"Taxes, of course, ought to be largely reduced as soon as possible. How far they can be reduced depends on whether Congress can get out of the wasteful habit of improvident expenditures. Economy and retrenchment must precede tax reduction. By that I do not mean drastic economies, but the application of common sense to Government expenditures. I must confess that there is no startling evidence of a desire for economy on the part of the Administration under the Wilson régime.

"It must be remembered that the control of the Government is still divided. The Democrats have possession of the executive branch, and while the Republicans have a safe majority in the House, their control of the Senate, for purposes outside of organization, is nominal. On tax questions the Republicans could not command a united majority, although nominally they have a majority of two in the Senate.

"Unless something unexpected occurs to demand imperatively immediate action, it is not likely that general revision can be safely taken up until after the next Presidential election, when it is hoped that the Republicans will be in control of all branches of the Government with working majorities in both houses of Congress. Then will come the opportunity to abolish the excess profits taxes and other similar complicated and burdensome forms of taxation, together with

FIND A MRS. LANE - LIVING IN CARMEL

She Was Known as Grace H., Her Husband as Joseph M., and Their Boy as Joseph.

SAID LITTLE TO NEIGHBORS

Special to The New York Times.

CARMEL, N. Y., Sept. 25.—Residents of this town are eager to learn whether a Mrs. Grace H. Lane, who has lived here a number of years with her husband, Joseph M. Lane, has any connection with the matrimonial tangle in which the name of J. Merritt Lane, Vice Chancellor of New Jersey, has been involved during the past few days.

Several newspaper correspondents called today at the home of Mrs. Mary D. Cole if Main Street, where Mrs. Grace H. Lane has lived of late, to inquire whether she could throw any light on the identity of the Grace Hercht Lane, who, according to Prosecutor Matthew Kenealy of Stamford, Conn., called upon him last June and asked that J. Merritt Lane be prosecuted for an alleged bigamous marriage with her in Stamford last April. The woman who appeared at the door said that Mrs. Grace H Lane was out of town and that at any rate she knew that Mrs. Lane had refused to make any statement to previous inquirers as to whether she knew anything about the Lane matrimonial mystery.

The Mrs. Lane who lives in Carmel has had her legal affairs attended to by a lawyer named Charles E. Kelley, who lives at Lake Mahopac near here. It will be recalled that the woman who called upon the Stamford prosecutor, Matthew Kenealy, last June and asked, Kenealy says, that J. Merritt Lane be prosecuted for alleged bigamy was accompanied by Attorney Charles E. Kelley, who lives in Mahopac and practices at 30 Pine Street, New York. Furthermore it is known to many here that Mrs. Lane of Carmel moved away from this town for a while and lived at South Norwalk, Conn. The Mrs. Lane who went to Stamford also lived in South Norwalk for a time, she told Kenealy.

Mrs. Lane of Carmel has a son 8 years old named Joseph, and her husband was known here as Joseph M. Lane. The woman who represented herself as Mrs. Lane when she called upon Prosecutor Kenealy said that she had a son, though the prosecutor did not recall the boy's name if she told it to him.

The Joseph M. Lane who lived here several years as this woman's husband was not well known in Carmel. Though his appearance was familiar—he is described as a short man, with very dark hair and smooth face and a noticeably quiet manner—he was so much a mystery to his neighbors that during the war there grew up a rumor that he was connected with the Secret Service. This Joseph M. Lane commuted nights and morning to Carmel when the couple first came here and lodged at the Smalley Inn seven years ago. Of late years Lane was seen here less frequently, and women who knew Mrs. Lane even say that she sometimes remarked that she failed to hear from her husband for a week at a time, and did not know his whereabouts. But whether Lane came here frequently or seldom, Carmel never learned much about him. He was secretive about his business to the extent of bluntly informing an occasional inquirer, "My business is none of your business."

During the time the couple lived on the Read farm near here they had few friends and Lane so discouraged sociability that even neighbors who called with the request to be allowed to use the telephone were denied admittance to the house.

Whether or not Mrs. Grace H. Lane who lives here with her boy is the victim of an unfortunate alliance, Carmel people are satisfied that she is not suffering financially. There is in fact every reason to believe that of late she has been in very comfortable circumstances. She has bought a building lot here and now is erecting a home in which she is expected to live. Also Mr. and Mrs. Lane are the owners of an Arabian horse originally given by the Sultan to Honier Davenport.

This horse has been exhibited at many fairs hereabouts and has taken many prizes. The couple, at any rate Mrs. Lane, also owns a pair of fine riding horses, a pony for her boy, and two handsome driving horses. She is known here as an expert horsewoman and there have been frequent rumors that earlier in her career she was an instructor in riding.

It was shortly after the Lanes came here, seven years ago, that their son was born in Smalley Inn. Soon thereafter they moved to the Bryant Palmer place, where they stayed about a year. Four or five years ago they bought the Read farm, for which they paid $10,500. Two years ago they sold this farm to a New York City man and moved to South Norwalk. Mrs. Lane returned here repeatedly and made frequent but unsuccessful efforts to rent a house here. A year ago she came back and arranged to live with Mrs. Cole. She lives there now, though it has been understood here that she would set up a home of her own as soon as her new house was completed.

TELLS OF LANE SETTLEMENT.

Swann Hears "Grace Hercht" Got $10,000 and $300 Yearly.

District Attorney Edward Swann made yesterday a brief investigation into the Lane matrimonial tangle in an effort to learn whether any violation of law had occurred in New York County. It was understood that the District Attorney was satisfied that there was nothing in the case to require his further attention.

Mr. Swann's only witness, so far as was learned, was Charles E. Kelley of 30 Pine Street, the lawyer who, according to Matthew Kenealy, Prosecutor of Stamford, Conn., came to Stamford last June with a woman who called herself Grace Hercht Lane and who declared to Mr. Kenealy that the Joseph Lane who married her in Stamford on April 4 last was in reality J. Merritt Lane, former Vice Chancellor of New Jersey. At the time the woman urged Mr. Kenealy to prosecute Lane, whom she accused of bigamy because of J. Merritt Lane's previous marriage in New Jersey to Mrs. Garrison-Kerr.

The District Attorney said last night that Kelley informed him in the course of the examination that he knew J. Merritt Lane personally and that he (Kelley) was able to assure Mr. Swann that there was absolutely no question but the man who had married his client, Grace Hercht, at Stamford on April 4 was J. Merritt Lane, Vice Chancellor of New Jersey.

Mr. Kelley is understood to have related to District Attorney Swann much the same story as he and his client told to Mr. Kenealy in Stamford. Mr. Swann did, however, elicit one important new fact which seemed to those familiar with the case to explain why, after the visit of lawyer and client to Stamford, Kelley subsequently requested the Stamford prosecutor to take no further action in the case. This information was that the man who married Mr. Kelley's client in Stamford on April 4 had made an agreement with her whereby he settled upon her $10,000 and agreed to pay to her annually the sum of $300 for the maintenance of the couple's son. This sum, Mr. Swann learned, was, by the terms of the agreement, to be reduced to $200 when the boy became of age.

Since none of the marriages involved in the case occurred in this county, Mr. Swann decided to take no further steps in the matter.

J. Merritt Lane yesterday maintained the same reticence as on previous days since his name has been connected with the case. When his attention was called to an item in Newark newspapers of April 4 showing that he on that date heard the case of Korn vs. Korn and he was reminded that the newspapers of the next day told of a decision in the case rendered by him late in the afternoon he refused to comment beyond saying, "The facts speak for themselves."

The Stamford marriage, according to the Rev. Dr. Frank, who performed the ceremony, occurred late in the afternoon.

Matthew Kenealy, Stamford prosecutor, who said on Wednesday that he thought Mrs. Hercht Lane had told him she first was married to Lane in Buffalo some years ago, found from his notes of the conversation yesterday that she had stated it occurred in Niagara Falls in 1912. Incomplete search of the vital statistics in Niagara Falls, however, had failed to disclose last night any record of the marriage.

FREE O'KEEFE IN ONE CASE.

Is Not Guilty of Having Arms—Reserve Sedition Decision.

DUBLIN, Sept. 25.—Patrick O'Keefe, Sinn Fein member of Parliament for the Northern Division of Cork, was acquitted today after a trial by court-martial on the charge of unlawfully having arms in his possession. He was arrested on Sept. 12 during the series of raids and searches for arms and documents carried out by the authorities here and elsewhere in Ireland.

On other charges of sedition, advocacy of public armed volunteers, and ostracism of the police, O'Keefe pleaded not guilty and refused to recognize the validity of the court. The court-martial thereupon reserved judgment.

Connaught's Use of Canadian Gift.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—The Duke of Connaught, it is learned, has decided to use the purse of money given to the late Duchess of Connaught by the women of Canada upon her departure from the Dominion to establish a Duchess of Connaught Memorial Hostelry for Canadian ex-service men in London.

PLANS REPLY TO COOLIDGE.

Boston Labor to Act on Statement Refusing Jobs to Police Strikers.

BOSTON, Sept. 25.—The Boston Central Labor Union will answer within forty-eight hours the statement of Governor Coolidge, in which the Governor declared that the policemen who "deserted their posts of duty" had "dispossessed themselves," and which was regarded today as putting an end to reports of a possible arrangement by which some of the strikers might be able to return.

President O'Donnell of the Central Labor Union said that labor's answer to the Governor would be prepared as soon as a special committee of the Central Labor Union, which has been in charge of the policemen's strike, could be convened.

Former army and navy veterans continued to apply today for places on the new force. Of thirty-three applicants sixteen were accepted subject to a non-competitive civil service examination, and seventeen rejected on physical grounds.

SYNAGOGUES FILLED FOR ROSH HA-SHANAH

RABBIS PLEAD FOR UNITY

From All Pulpits Appeals Are Made for Ending Clashes Between Labor and Capital.

Rosh Ha-Shanah, the Jewish New Year, was celebrated yesterday in all the synagogues of the city. So many Jews came to their houses of worship to hear the year 5680 of the Hebrew calendar ushered in with the blowing of the Shofar, or ram's horn trumpet, that many of the edifices were filled to overflowing. Particularly on the east side was the outpouring so great that many were unable to enter the synagogues.

A number of East Side theatres were closed for the day, as were most business enterprises conducted by orthodox Jews. In other theatres there were programs commemorative of the day; while all Jewish philanthropic and social welfare organizations conducted special services, in some instances the children selecting a cantor from among their own number and holding their own ceremonies.

Practically all congregations heard special appeals for the $10,000,000 United Building fund now being raised by thirty-two social service and charitable institutions, the rabbis urging the worthiness of this cause.

Many of the clergymen devoted their sermons to a discussion of the wider world-horizon offered to Jews and their brighter prospect on social justice because of the liberalizing of the world through the war. Others spoke on the industrial warfare abroad in the land, calling upon both capital and labor to adopt a more righteous attitude toward each other.

Prayers for the success of the League of Nations also marked a few of the services.

In the Institutional Synagogue, Rabbi Herbert S. Goldstein said:

"We must all here highly resolve for the New Year to make every effort to abolish the clash of class that now exists between capital and labor. Higher wages and shorter hours are not the sole remedies. The remedy is more fundamental. It must come by the tuning of the hearts of men to break down the privileges of classes that have in the past been the walls of separation between brother and brother."

Rabbi Nathan Krass, recently returned from a tour through Eastern Europe, preached at the Central Synagogue on "A League of Hearts," saying in part:

"If the bruised and bleeding nations of the world are to recuperate and if war is to be no more, it will not be due to any mechanical or diplomatic contrivance. A league of all the nations is certainly desirable. But there must be concurrently a league of hearts."

The prohibition amendment was characterized by Rabbi Mortimer I. Bloom, newly installed rabbi of the Washington Heights Free Synagogue, as the "opening gun in a carefully planned campaign of religious fanatics, professional moralists, and paid uplifters to inaugurate a puritanical theocracy in this once free Republic." The rabbi added:

"Emboldened by their initial success, they now mean to proceed without delay on their grandiose plan of establishing a statutory religion and a compulsory morality in America. If this ambitious and unscrupulous minority are suffered to attain their foul and un-American objective, personal liberty and individual responsibility will become dead issues in the United States, freedom of thought will be annihilated, and non-conformity to the new State religion will be made a capital offense. If there still remain any red-blooded Americans who venerate those ideals of liberty and toleration on which the Republic is founded they will be on their guard against the approaching peril and rush out to meet it."

"We are witnessing history in the making," said Rabbi Maurice H. Harris in Temple Israel in Harlem. "The rapid change in the status of all peoples is notable in the life of the new. Perhaps the most important outcome of the colossal conflict has been the restatement of the rights of minorities. It is most noticeable in Poland, a new kingdom, called into being as an outcome of the allied victory. For a treaty was signed this Summer by Poland guaranteeing special protection for the Jews dwelling within it with regard to the maintenance of their schools and the observance of their faith.

Rabbi Samuel Schulman preached in Temple Beth-El on "Israel's Message to Mankind," saying:

"The evil in man expresses itself in all sorts of exploitations, outrages, disparities between riches and want, and the hideous contrasts which mar our civilization and from which man is seeking to emancipate himself. Judaism is an appeal to the will to struggle against and to overcome these evils."

PEACE FOR ARMENIA AT COST OF TERRITORY

PARIS, Sept. 25.—Advices to the American Red Cross from Erivan say that Colonel William Haskell, High Commissioner for the four great powers in Armenia, and the Secretary of State for the Ajerbaijan Republic have drawn up a treaty under which Armenia cedes the Province of Zangezur to Ajerbaijan in return for the withdrawal of Kurdish and Tartar troops from the eastern and southern fronts of Armenia.

The treaty has not yet been presented to the Armenian Parliament, where it is likely to encounter strong opposition as Zangezur, "the cradle of Armenia," has been peopled by the Armenians since 700 B. C., and also because profitable mines are situated there in which much Armenian capital is invested.

ful entry. Magistrate McQuade dismissed the complaint.

"Mr. Heide then came to the District Attorney. He was advised to get another summons for Freise on the charge of disorderly conduct. He did so, and Magistrate McQuade ordered Freise to turn over the keys to Heide. When Heide got back to the building, the Superintendent told him he didn't have the keys. Heide then went to Zittel, and was told at the agent's office that nothing was known there about the case.

Says He Boasted of "Pull."

"I directed Detective John Cunniff and John Marcey, my private secretary," continued Mr. Talley, "to go to the apartment and put Heide in possession, and to break or chop down the door, if necessary."

Cunniff said the Superintendent refused to let them use the elevator, and brought in a policeman to bar their way. This policeman, Frohlich of the West 100th Street Station, refused to interfere when Cunniff showed his shield, and the detective finally reached the fourth floor by the freight elevator.

"We had axes, crowbars, and chisels, but found we could neither break down nor chop the door," Cunniff told Mr. Talley. "The door was made of steel, and it was barricaded with timbers inside in such a way that no leverage we could bring to bear had any effect. While we were trying to get in Katz appeared and told us he knew his rights and that he would not permit the police or the District Attorney to deprive him of them. Then Katz said:

"'I was a friend of Big Tim Sullivan, and I know everybody who is worth while, and I won't be buffaloed by the District Attorney or anybody else.' Katz also said he had been a prizefighter some years ago and intimated that he could protect himself."

Mr. Talley had Katz subpoenaed to the Criminal Court Building, where he was told he would be prosecuted. Katz, according to Mr. Talley, said he wanted to get the apartment ready for his use by Oct. 1, but had no other explanation to offer. He telephoned to Friese to give up the keys.

A subpoena was also served on Thomas Flannagan, an employe of Zittel. Cunniff said Flannagan had telephoned to the agent's office and had notified Miss Margaret McManus, the telephone operator, to tell the manager as subpoena had been issued for him.

Mr. Talley said Katz had hired an attorney for Friese, and had caused Friese to obtain a summons for Mr. Heide on a charge of having him unlawfully arrested. Mr. Heide is a son of Henry Heide, who was created a Knight of St. Gregory by the Pope.

Agent Gives His Version.

Frank M. Zittel, Secretary and Treasurer of Frederick Zittel & Sons, said last night that Mr. Heide had notified him he would not renew his lease Oct. 1 and did not intend again to reside in the apartment.

"I understand Mr. Heide has an apartment in West Seventy-second Street and moved his effects there some time ago," said Mr. Zittel. "Katz offered a month's rent to Mr. Heide for permission to enter and make alterations, which was declined. Katz has an invalid wife, who is in the hospital, and has been advised that she must be moved, and he wanted to have the home prepared for her.

"As the apartment was empty, as we understood, we permitted him to enter under the terms of a clause in the lease which permits us to enter at any time to make repairs and alterations.

"Mr. Heide had been a tenant for a number of years, and he was such a desirable tenant that we wanted him to remain, but the apartment was not large enough for his family."

1,600 GERMANS SAIL TODAY.

Returning Home Under Guard After Release from Internment Camps.

One thousand six hundred Germans who have been interned in this country will sail today on the steamship Pocahontas under a guard commanded by Colonel T. A. Ashburn, U. S. A. The passenger list of the vessel will contain the names of some who were prominent in their country's service and whose activities ended with a visit from a Department of Justice agent. In the party are 115 women, who are voluntarily going to Germany, most of them being wives of interned men.

While awaiting transfer to the steamship the men were kept in the cars from which they had come from Fort Oglethorpe and Fort McPherson and other internment points. They all appeared glad to be going back to Germany and chatted, played cards, laughed, and sang.

The only excitement was caused by a German who escaped from the train, went to Hoboken to visit friends, and had a hard time getting back because the guards on the gate would not allow him in without a pass.

CHARLES L. FREER, ART COLLECTOR, DIES

MILLION TO HOUSE GIFT

Donor of 1,200 Works of Whistler Alone a Victim of Apoplexy at Hotel Gotham at 65.

Charles Lang Freer, of Detroit, art collector, died last night at his apartments in the Hotel Gotham of a stroke of apoplexy. He was in his sixty-sixth year and though he had been in poor health for several years he had shown signs of improvement until a few months ago when he came to this city.

Mr. Freer was born in Kingston, N. Y., was educated at the public schools of Ulster County and then moved to the West. He made a fortune in railroads and in manufacturing in Detroit. He retired from active business in 1900 and devoted himself to searching in all parts of the earth, but particularly the Far East, Near East, and Egypt, for objects of art which his own judgment and those of the experts who advised him were of the very highes quality. He once stated the prime motive for his artistic researches:

"My pleasure has been in discovery, not in possession."

It was in 1915 that he made the announcement that he had sold to the Smithsonian Institution at Washington his entire collection for the sum of one dollar. The conditions of the sale, which gave to the people of the United States possession of one of the greatest art collections ever gathered by a single individual, were that the treasures should remain in Mr. Freer's possession until his death when they should go to Washington.

At the same time he announced that he would build a magnificent art gallery, costing $1,000,000, to house the collection, which contained more than 5,000 objects in all. Some idea of the range of the collection may be gathered when it is stated that it contained 1,200 specimens of Whistler's work, including paintings in oil, water color, pastel and engravings, and the famous Peacock Room, which the eccentric American genius decorated for Leyland, the English collector and ship owner; 100 paintings by other American artists, notably Sargent, Hassam and Thayer; more than 1,600 pieces of ancient glazed pottery gathered by Mr. Freer in the Far and Near East; in this connection it should be noted that Mr. Freer was one of the first, if not the very first, American collector of recent years to believe that there were any very fine ancient paintings left in China. He said himself:

"For years I went to Japan thinking that my only chance was to find them there. Then I went far into the interior of China and found many splendid examples of what I was after, some owned by private collectors, others in the hands of people who had no idea of their value."

This splendid collection, whose value runs up into the millions, just how far Mr. Freer could never be induced to say, was not given without some slight difficulty. When the owner first approached the Smithsonian authorities with the proposition it was found not to be entirely simple to arrange for a sale to the institution even for the nominal sum of $1 and still permit Mr. Freer to retain the treasures until his death.

It was brought to the attention of President Roosevelt that a hitch had arisen somewhere, and he, with characteristic directness, at once arranged a meeting between Mr. Freer and the late Chief Justice Melville W. Fuller, then chief of the Board of Regents of the Institution, and the matter was speedily arranged.

One of the most remarkable objects collected by Mr. Freer during his world-wide search was an old Greek Bible he bought from an Arab dealer in antiques in Gizeh. It has given rise to the claim that we possess a sixth codex, and apparently the last of the great codices from which our knowledge of the life and teachings of Christ as incorporated in the Bible have come. It contains verses which were known to St. Jerome but which were missing from the five other codices.

Mr. Freer was a bachelor. His nearest surviving relative is his brother, Watson M. Freer, of Kingston, N. Y. His home in Detroit was at 33 Ferry Avenue. His clubs in this city were the Groller and the Players.

MAN WHO LEADS

Eternal progress is the only hope of humanity.

Doers of great deeds find their finest reward in the monuments they leave to posterity, in the records of their achievements which are handed down to future generations.

Before the eyes of the pioneer is a vision which advances with his ever advancing desires. The progress of civilization makes possible the progress of the pioneer, the leader, the great industrial genius. The world must ripen to receive the full expression of his powers.

It is to this man who leads, to whom this advertisement is directed. He has profited by our stable national life. His service to humanity has been given tangible reward. We now invite this man to put the crowning touch to his genius; to show a greatness of generosity equal to the greatness of his vision.

The church has shown itself the chiefest stabilizing force in civilization. The need for its vast service in both spiritual and secular education was never so imperative as it is today. The founding of schools abroad and the Americanization of the foreigner here at home must be carried on with increasing effort. And this work is in accord with the heart's desire of every truly great, every truly American, leader.

Others are giving their utmost, and will continue to give; but we want some one of our national pioneers to give out of his bounty, and to give bountifully. One hundred thousand dollars from this man will put a new seal upon the title of his leadership, and assure the success of our Victory Campaign.

Let the pioneer rise to the fullness of his power. Let him prove that his vision goes down through the generations. Let the man who is worthy of this title, worthy of the enduring gratitude of leaders not yet born, act now.

For men with ingrowing beards—the right way to shave

To do away with irritation on the neck—the "collar-line"—the beard must be softened properly. Stretching the skin in order to get a close shave is then unnecessary. The "collar-line" can be cured.

The hair of the beard is composed chiefly of keratin, the same horn-like substance that makes the fingernails hard and sharp. Each hair is surrounded by a film of oil supplied by the skin. The creamy, thick-textured lather of the new Woodbury's Shaving Stick instantly dissolves the oil film and softens the keratin.

Even a razor that is but moderately sharp will not pull and irritate the skin.

If you are troubled with an annoying "collar-line," the commonest symptom of the beard that grows back under the skin, follow this method of shaving:

Rub the dry beard lightly with the fingertips. This is to release the hairs which have grown under the skin and which are the chief cause of the "collar-line."

When the hairs are released, the true tendency of the grain can be determined. If the grain runs in irregular directions, take care to note it.

After moistening your face thoroughly, apply Woodbury's Shaving Stick and work up a heavy lather with the brush. It is never necessary to rub in the Woodbury lather.

Never stretch the skin tight, either with the fingers or by tilting the head too much. When a tender skin is held taut, shaving is sure to make it sore. Always shave with the grain, using easy, diagonal strokes.

After shaving, rub the lather that remains on the brush lightly but fully into the pores. This cleanses and refreshes the skin—gives it that velvety, well-shaved feeling. Rinse first with hot water and then with cold. This closes the pores and stimulates the skin.

CITY UNION MAKES A PLEA TO MAYOR

APPROVES PAY INCREASE

NO INTENTION TO STRIKE

Chairman Wittenberg Urges Organization So Strong It Would Not Be Necessary.

At a meeting of the Municipal Employes Association of the City of New York in the Municipal Building last night, Hugo Wittenberg, a clerk in the Finance Department who acted as temporary chairman, made a public appeal to Mayor Hylan to withdraw his mandate issued against the organization. Mr. Wittenberg declared that such an association was absolutely necessary if the city employes were to get the most out of life, and he recommended affiliating with other civil service organizations.

The Chairman's words were received with applause by the score or more delegates from the various city departments present, but no definite action was taken to prolong the life of the organization. A resolution was offered by Alexander Cooper, chief clerk in the Department of Public Works of the Borough of Manhattan, expressing appreciation of the Association for the increase in salaries granted by the Board of Estimate. The resolution follows:

Resolved, That the Municipal Employes Association of the City of New York approve the scale of salary increases adopted by the Finance and Budget Committee, but would recommend that the dead line of $2,500 be dedated, so that all employes in the classified and unclassified service, irrespective of the amount of their salaries, shall be given an increase.

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be transmitted to his Honor the Mayor and to the other members of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment with our sincere thanks.

Mr. Wittenberg prefaced his remarks on the necessity of organization by relating how in former administrations city employes had had their salaries reduced without receiving a chance for a hearing.

Aims at Improvement.

"Why should Mayor Hylan stand in the way of such an organization as ours? Why should he seek to scare away the members of it and those who founded it? We have not organized to interfere in any way, shape, or form with the city administration, but only desire to further in every manner possible the city employes, men and women.

"If we get together the material here and the material scared away by the Mayor's mandate we will have a splendid organization, one I would back against any labor organization in the world. At present city employes in order to get any increase in salaries have frequently to go to political leaders and be led by them to the heads of the different departments. By our organization we will take the working force out of politics.

"We will not have to resort to a strike to attain our ends if we only create a strong organization. The weight of our numbers will enable us to get what we want, whether it be pay or better working conditions.

Want Reconsideration.

"I appeal to Mayor Hylan to withdraw his mandate against us, and allow those whom it scared away to come back. The Mayor is not a bad man, nor is the Board of Estimate bad. They have given us all they possibly can in the increases granted. We should not hold his mandate against the Mayor, but should ask him to reconsider it."

After Mr. Wittenberg spoke there was silence. Apparently no other person was to take an active part in the discussion. Mr. Cooper got up and offered the resolution, which, after a short debate, was adopted. Mr. Wittenberg, when the meeting closed, called upon those present to leave their names so that they could be notified in case of another meeting. A few availed themselves of the opportunity, but the most failed to respond.

Discussing the grant of increases after the meeting, Mr. Cooper told newspaper men that in his opinion there was no ground for dissatisfaction among the men and women working for the city.

"We are satisfied," said Mr. Cooper. "I think that I can speak the minds of most of the city's employes, too, when I say so. If anybody is not satisfied, then I should say he was an undesirable member of the community and should get out. We didn't get all we asked for. You know our organization wanted increases up to $420, and we got them only up to $250. However, we must remember that the Board of Estimate was under two fires, from us and from the taxpayers.

"Now it is all right to get after the profiteering landlord, but how about the man who owns his small house and lives in it himself. Remember these increases are going to come out of his pockets as well as out of those with big apartment houses. We do not want to be unfair to anybody. I think the board has been very generous, and we should appreciate it."

AMERICA TO EXTEND ALLIES LONGER CREDIT

About $10,000,000,000 to be Funded Into Long-Time Securities—Britain Owes Most.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—Negotiations will be put under way soon for the funding of the Allies' obligations to the United States into long-term securities. Approximately $10,000,000,000 of war credits have been advanced to the Allies on short-term notes. Interest charges on the outstanding notes will be taken care of in the details of the funding agreement yet to be worked out.

Education Association Says 65,000 Sub-Standard Are Employed.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—The public schools of the nation began the new school year with a shortage of approximately 38,000 teachers. This estimate was made today by the National Education Association on the basis of questionnaires sent to 3,465 district and county school Superintendents in all States.

To meet the acute shortage, due in large part, Commissioner of Education Claxton has said, to the low salaries paid, it is estimated that approximately 65,000 teachers were employed who were below the standard requirements in the school districts.

CLEMENCEAU URGES OUR SENATE TO ACT

COUNTS ON US IN PEACE

Our Army Made Victory Possible—Deputies Now Inclined to Prolong Debate.

PARIS, Sept. 25, (Associated Press.)—Premier Clemenceau delivered his long-expected speech in the debate on the ratification of the Peace Treaty in the Chamber of Deputies this afternoon. The whole trend of his argument in favor of the treaty was that the treaty was one of solidarity between allies, who, united in war, must be united in peace.

During his address the Premier said that if he had any word to send the United States Senate it would be that it hurry the ratification of the treaty.

M. Clemenceau admitted that the treaty contained many imperfections, but said that it was the culmination of the work of "the coalition of liberation," the first of its sort in the history of the world, as the treaty was the dawn of a new era.

He recalled the dark days of 1917, and declared to the opponents of the treaty that if a peace proposal had been received then, returning Alsace and Lorraine to France, no Frenchmen would have demanded the insertion of any other clause, but would have accepted it.

The treaty brought back more than the lost provinces, he went on; it placed France on the highest pinnacle of fame and honor, and in a few years would bring prosperity.

Those who had spoken in the debate, the Premier pointed out, had criticised the details of the treaty, which must be considered, accepted or rejected as a whole, whether the instrument was helpful or harmful to France. The treaty was "the ensemble of possibilities," which was worth what the future ruling classes of France would make it by their labor.

The Premier's effort was tremendous. He remained on the tribune more than two hours. Many times he seemed to weaken and his voice became so low as to be almost inaudible beyond the first row of Government benches. But he waved off the advice from all quarters of the Chamber to "rest," and doggedly continued to display his indomitable spirit. He passed lightly over the criticism, which has been prominent in the debate, that the French language was not the official language of the treaty, saying:

"It is not my fault if the English language is spoken by nearly two-thirds of the civilized world."

Referring to the entry of the United States into the war, the Premier said that France might count upon America in time of peace as well as in war.

If Germany had not declared war, the Premier asserted, she would have Germanized the whole world. The Socialists in the Chamber, where there was a full attendance of Deputies, protested violently at this statement.

The Premier read documents showing that Great Britain came spontaneously to the help of France without being bound by any military accord.

M. Clemenceau eulogized the American Army. The war, he said, could not have been won without its aid.

His principal argument in reply to critics of the treaty was that France was only one of four great powers that had won the war and, therefore, it could not expect a distinctly French peace. These powers had to make peace together as they had made war, he said.

M. Clemenceau warned the Chamber that if it refused to ratify the treaty, it would make it an instrument of death to France, while if the Chamber ratified the instrument, France would become imbued with its spirit, which would mean the life and resurrection of the country.

The Chamber's apparent determination to prolong the debate as long as possible was not deterred by the Premier's requests for action on the treaty today, for, while M. Clemenceau was speaking, several Deputies inscribed their names on President Deschanel's list as participants in the debate.

The debate bids fair to run well into next month, unless the Government forces a vote or asks the Chamber to cancel the privileges of those who have expressed their intention of speaking. This the Premier seems disinclined to do.

An abstract of Premier Clemenceau's views concerning the Peace Treaty and things in general, as given to Senator Monsserin a few days ago, is published in L'Eclair. After declaring that he never doubted that Marshal Foch and the allied troops would bring victory, M. Clemenceau said:

"Glorious peace! We should have desired it, no doubt, with greater advantages for our country. But let those who criticise the treaty and find the clauses insufficient, reflect upon France's condition before the war. Let them recollect that at certain hours the situation of France was very low, that France did not make war alone, and that, despite our great love for our country, we could not dream of placing her in the position which she occupied at the height of her power after the great victories of the First Empire.

"Politically, my conceptions have modified. Not that I have abandoned my democratic ideal, but my view of the mode of its application and realization has greatly changed.

"Formerly I had great distrust for the clergy; it encroached, with concealing the liberty of our thought and persecuting out freedom, and, in the early days of the war, when I traveled to the trenches, I used to ask the soldiers, pointing out the chaplain, 'Does he not annoy you?' The soldiers invariably replied: 'Among us? Quite the contrary; he is brave, charming, devoted, cheerful. We love him much.'

"Many times regiments asked me to decorate their chaplains because of magnificent acts of bravery and devotion. These priests I decorated and congratulated with all my heart. A man who renders useful and benefactory services to his country must be considered a good servant of democracy, regardless of religious and political opinions.

"No one, if he loyally accepts the republic, must be considered as an adversary, and in order that collaboration of all parties shall be possible the Government will have no candidates at the elections.

"After the elections," concludes M. Clemenceau, "I will retire with the great reward that comes from the satisfaction of having done one's duty and with the friendship of my dear poilus, of whom I shall think always."

Asked by Senator Monsserin as to the future of France, M. Clemenceau said:

"Our new frontiers—we must be ready to safeguard them with something else besides legal subtleties. A treaty is nothing unless a nation has the will to see that its clauses and spirit are observed. France must produce men, and strong men, steeled against weakness and vacillation."

BOYS ADMIT THEFT OF $2,000 IN BONDS

POLICE RECOVER MONEY

Pennsylvania Motorist Arrested for Having Pistol He Carried to Foil Thieves.

When William Perle and George Christian, two youthful messengers employed by S. C. Chapin & Co., were arraigned yesterday in the Tombs Court, charged with stealing $2,000 worth of Liberty bonds, they broke down and confessed. The lads said they had delivered half of the package of $4,000 worth of bonds and had disposed of the rest for $1,680.

Perle said his share of the money was hidden in a toy stove in his home, while Christian had chosen the hall carpet as his hiding place. The money was recovered intact, and the police began a search for a third boy, who sold the bonds for Perle and Christian.

Policeman Peter Washington, just out of the rookie class, attached to the Parkville Station, Brooklyn, was on his way home early yesterday when he saw a man draw a revolver on another at Avenue L and East Fifteenth Street. He pursued and captured George Jones of 17 Myrtle Avenue, who was held in $4,000 bail for examination next Tuesday.

Arraigned yesterday on a short affidavit, charging suspicion of highway robbery, Joseph Monteforte of 749 East 229th Street was held in $5,000 bail by Magistrate George Simpson in Essex Market Court. The charge grew out of the holdup of Charles Fleigh of 434 East Eleventh Street.

As Harry Shappiro of Chambersburg, Penn., stepped into his auto in that place for a run to New York to visit friends, he had a sudden mental picture of this city. Having read in the newspapers of holdups and other crimes, he had a vision of highwaymen on the street corners and burglars passing silverware down fire escapes. He almost saw organized banditry invading City Hall Park.

In consequence, he climbed out of his car, went into his house, slipped a revolver in his pocket, and felt somewhat easier concerning a large sum of money he carried. The Pennsylvanian was entering the Bronx shortly after daybreak when Detectives Herman Meyers and William Wubbenhurst of the Simpson Street Station were "looking for suspicious characters."

"How do you get to Monterey Avenue?" asked Shappiro. The detectives observed the Pennsylvania tag. Then they asked permission to search the car. That was enough for Shappiro. He pulled out his revolver and told them to stand back. The detectives grabbed him, displayed their shields, and inspected the car. They then took him to the station house, charging violation of the Sullivan law.

Magistrate W. Bruce Cobb held Shappiro in $300 bail for trial in Special Sessions, and immediately arraignment he was discharged when he told his story.

Thomas Baldrick of Gardena, Cal., was placed under $8,000 bail by County Judge Nash in Brooklyn on a charge of robbery and assault. Baldrick is alleged to have been one of the three men who, on July 8, held up and robbed James J. Hardcastle of 396 Third Street, Brooklyn, Superintendent of the Borden Farms Products Company, obtaining $4,000. Two alleged confederates were arrested the next day and Baldrick was traced to a California shipyard.

STOLEN BEER CAUSES FIGHT.

Free-for-All Battle Starts When Keg Is Taken from Wagon.

A fight over a keg of 2.75 beer which resulted in several men being beaten and the Police Reserves from the East Fifty-first Station being called to the rescue, took place yesterday at Forty-third Street and Second Avenue.

George Kerchner, driver for the J. C. G. Brewing Company, backed a truck load of beer kegs up to Patrick Shanley's saloon. Suddenly about six men, who were said by the police to belong to the "Pogy Row bunch" composed of gangsters with criminal records, jumped on the wagon and started to roll one of the kegs down the street. Kerchner gave chase. The rowdies turned upon him, and according to Patrolman Harry Vincent, the first officer on the scene, gave him a terrible beating.

Shanley, the proprietor of the saloon, came to the driver's rescue, together with other men who worked in the cafe, and a free-for-all fight started. Then a few dozen men living in the neighborhood took a hand. A riot call was sent in and the Police Reserves quickly arrived. The police say that they have the names of four of the gang and arrests will be made.

KING ALBERT AT MOVIES DECORATES NAVY MEN

ON BOARD THE U. S. S. GEORGE WASHINGTON, Sept. 25, (By Wireless to The Associated Press.)—King Albert of Belgium, whose voyage to the United States is proceeding uneventfully amid fine weather, bestowed decorations yesterday upon the three ranking naval officers on the steamship which is bringing him across the Atlantic.

Rear Admiral Andrew T. Long, who is acting as escort to the royal party, was made a Grand Officer of the Order of Leopold; Captain Edward McCauley, Jr., commander of the George Washington, an Officer of the Order of Leopold, and Commander Fred M. Perkins, executive officer of the George Washington, an Officer of the Order of the Crown. The ceremony took place on deck in the presence of Queen Elizabeth and Crown Prince Leopold, together with the officers of the King's suite.

The escorting destroyers left the George Washington during the day. As they started on their return trip King Albert sent them this message:

"The King wishes to express his sincere thanks and appreciation to the Captains, officers, and members of the destroyers in escort, and regrets that they have had such a rough time."

Crown Prince Leopold made a trip over the steamer yesterday, displaying much interest in her equipment and method of control. All the royal party attended the moving picture exhibition in the steamer's theatre.

King Albert, who always keeps himself in fine physical condition, organized today an impromptu tennis game on the deck of the George Washington, in which the players used their hands instead of racquets. Captain McCauley and Commander Perkins were among those who played with the King.

Queen Elizabeth made an early visit to the sick bay of the steamer, where several soldiers are ill. Later she played shuffleboard with the Countess De Chimay.

The jackies and soldiers on board are arranging to hold an athletic meet Saturday for the Belgian Crown Prince.

Mrs. L. M. Barnard Wins Separation

Supreme Court Justice Lehman granted yesterday a decree of separation to Mrs. Lydia M. Barnard from Orin A. Barnard, a dry goods commission merchant alleged to have an income of $100,000 a year, on the consent of the parties to the action. Barnard agrees to pay his wife $400 a month alimony and to make his son, Edward, the beneficiary of life insurance aggregating $35,000. If the father is alive when endowment policies of $20,000 mature he will get the money.

Congress Asked to Exclude the Japanese Accused of Breaking Immigration Barrier

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—Japan was charged with "flagrant violations" of the commonly-termed gentlemen's agreement with this country by V. S. McClatchy of Sacramento, Cal., and Miller Freeman of Seattle today before the House Immigration Committee.

Testifying in relation to the committee's consideration of the bill which would permit a certain percentage of the nationals of a country to enter the United States each year, both said that Japanese control of many industries in Washington, Oregon, California, and Colorado was being enlarged through violations of the agreement, which forbids the entry of Japanese laborers, both skilled and unskilled, into the United States.

"The Japanese Government is issuing passports under anything but the heading of labor," declared Mr. Freeman, adding that violation of the agreement was obvious, for soon after the immigrants landed they could be found at work on farms and elsewhere along the Pacific Coast. Both urged exclusion of the Japanese, asserting their admission was creating an economic menace to the entire country.

In California, Mr. McClatchy said, the Japanese produced 90 per cent. of the strawberry and cantaloupe crops; 80 per cent. of the onions, asparagus, tomatoes, celery, lettuce and cut flowers; 55 per cent. of the cabbage and seeds, 40 per cent. of the potatoes, 20 per cent. of the beans, and 10 per cent. of the grapes, fruit and rice. He cited Japanese authorities to support his statement, and added that the tuna and sardine fisheries in the southern part of the State also were falling into their control.

In Oregon, he added, half of the Hood River Valley apple crop was Japanese controlled, while in Colorado the Rocky Ford melon crop was 85 per cent. Japanese controlled. In Seattle, Mr. Freeman related that hotels, groceries, garages, truck gardening and miscellaneous small businesses were fast coming under their domination.

American merchants were unable to compete with the Japanese, the witnesses declared, because of the foreigners' low standards of living, long hours of industry and close co-operating among themselves, together with the financial support of their home Government.

Since 1900 the Japanese population in this country had increased six fold, McClatchy asserted, while the Chinese, under the Exclusion act, had decreased from one-half to two-thirds in number.

Senator Phelan, California, attending the hearing as a spectator, told the committee that he had assurances from the State Department that it was investigating the "picture bride" and her legal status.

He joined the others in asserting that an acute problem has been provoked along the Pacific Coast, but said his information from the State Department was that it regarded the gentlemen's agreement to be working with "fair satisfaction," except as to the "picture bride" admissions

ROSALIND HITS REEF, WITH 203 ON BOARD

BORE MANY NEW YORKERS

All Passengers Are Landed Safely and Are Sent Here by Special Train.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., Sept. 25.—The Red Cross Line steamship Rosalind, bound from St. John's, Newfoundland, for New York, with 141 first cabin passengers and 62 steerage passengers, also a cargo of 10,000 barrels of fish, ran on Cowes Reef in a fog about 6:30 o'clock this morning and was badly damaged.

By permission of the immigration authorities the passengers were landed here, and, after undergoing medical inspection and having their baggage inspected, were sent to New York in a special train which left Stamford early tonight.

More than half of the passengers were women, among them a number of trained nurses. There was comparatively little excitement aboard, even among the babies and children, of whom there were many.

The Rosalind was several miles off her course, and was steaming about twelve knots an hour when she hit. Captain H. C. Mitchell, her commander, had left the bridge at 3 A. M., and Chief Officer William James was in command of the boat. She bumped along the reef almost a full boat's length before she stopped. A great hole was torn in the forward hold, and another beneath the engines. It was necessary to have pumps working constantly to keep the inrushing water away from the engines.

Position Is Not Dangerous.

Her position is not particularly dangerous, and it is expected she will be hauled off the reef tomorrow by a wrecker.

The Rosalind is a steel vessel of 3,000 tons burden, 305 feet long, and 50 feet beam. She was built in 1912, and is owned by C. T. Bowring & Co., Ltd., Liverpool. Bowring & Co. are the New York agents.

The ship sailed from St. John's on Sept. 20, and stopped at Halifax on the way down. Sir Edward Bowring, one of the Directors of Bowring & Co., was aboard the ship when she left St. John's. At Halifax he was transferred to the Carmania.

Captain Mitchell, commander of the Rosalind, lives in Brooklyn. He was chief officer aboard the Red Cross liner Stephano when she was torpedoed off Newport in the Summer of 1918 by a German submarine. He and other officers were also aboard the ill-fated Florizel of the Red Cross Line when she was lost near Cape Race.

Many New Yorkers Aboard.

Among the passengers aboard the Rosalind today were:

Dr. Lawrence Keegan, chief surgeon of the General Hospital at St. John's; Mrs. Nellie Mulholland, daughter of a prominent St. John's business man, and Martin Shiff; Dr. Clarence McDonald, health officer at St. John's; Miss Bessie Hartrey and Miss Lily Hartrey, nurses on the staff of the General Hospital, St. John's; the Rev. Brother Adolphus of the Xavierian Order, Baltimore; Mayor Auguste Solomon and Mrs. Solomon of St. Pierre Miquelon; Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. The Rosalind was bound from St. John's and Halifax for this port. Besides eighty first and sixty-one cabin passengers she carried a cargo of 6,000 barrels of salted fish. She went ashore in the fog. A telegram received by the company from Captain H. C. Mitchell said that a hole had been smashed in the bottom of the vessel under hold No. 1. This part of the ship was flooded but the bulkheads held and other holds were not damaged. None of the passengers' baggage was in the damaged part of the vessel.

A wrecking crew was sent out from New York with equipment to help float the vessel. The Rosalind formerly was the Lady Gwendolyn, plying in the Dundee-London trade. She was making her third voyage from Halifax to New York. She will be withdrawn from the service when refloated and converted into an oil burner.

Union of Violence Sought Also with Austrians—Hirsch Announces Disclosures.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 24.—Although Spartacism in Germany has been driven below ground, it is still active and public attention today is concentrated upon an exposure of Spartacide documents appointing political murderers by lot.

There have recently been rumors of fresh Spartacide upheavals in Munich, while the recent troubles in Halle were not conducive to an easy state of mind, but today's exposures are none the less surprising. They are accepted as seriously as the official announcements would seem to suggest.

Herr Hirsch, President of the Prussian National Assembly, stated at a meeting of the assembly that officials of the Saxon Government had discovered in the possession of a Spartacide agitator who was about to proceed abroad a document revealing plans for further co-operative action among the Spartacide in Germany, Austria and Czechoslovakia addressed "to all confidential agents." This document contained the following principal points:

First, that the groups in the three countries named should form one united party, whose object would be the registration of all those forces which would oppose a Spartacide rising, and which were to be watched and arrested when the rising took place.

Second, that should the Central Executive of the united parties decide that any inconvenient opponent had to be "removed," then the murder should be committed by that section of the party in whose country the inconvenient person lived.

Third, that the person to commit the murder would be appointed by lot.

There are various other points, among them one that "treachery to the party is to be punished by death," but these are mostly points of internal management.

This document is published tonight by the official Deutsche Algemeine Zeitung, which also refers to another circular issued by the secretary of the Spartacide union of Saxony to the members of the party in Czechoslovakia. By the terms of this circular, which is of recent date and officially stamped and sealed, the Czechoslovak party was warned to hold itself in readiness for action, for conferences are being held, it says, in Berlin, Hamburg and Bremen, at which decisions of great importance for the international proletariat are to be taken. It portentously announces that the time has come when the Ebert-Noske Government must be overthrown and this, it deduces, somehow, will be of the utmost importance for Czechoslovakia.

After again stating that the Czech party must hold itself in readiness the circular remarks that the Czechs must finance their own revolution, as the German party cannot acquire enough for their own funds for their own propaganda.

Great prominence is given to these exposures, the authenticity of which is said to be guaranteed; but the question may be asked whether it is true that they are worthy of such prominence. Everybody knows that Spartacism is not dead and is still conducting propaganda, and everybody knows that it is prepared to use desperate means. The Government is, as always, apprehensive of what the extremists are doing, and, while not attaching great importance to these documents, it probably intends to put troops in the suspected areas and is simply preparing the public.

SAY LENIN IS CAPTIVE IN KREMLIN AT MOSCOW

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 25.—A special dispatch from Stockholm reports that Nikolai Lenin, the Bolshevist Premier, is kept prisoner in the Kremlin at Moscow and that People's Commissary Dershinski is now in power and controlling the army.

It is feared, however, in the Red capital that the army will revolt when it learns what has happened to Lenin.

RUMOR THAT LENIN IS SLAIN.

Paris Bourse Hears It, but It Is Denied in Chamber Lobbies.

PARIS, Sept. 25.—A rumor was in circulation on the Bourse here today that Nicolai Lenin, the Russian Bolshevist Premier, had been assassinated.

The report also reached the lobbies of the Chamber of Deputies, but here it was promptly denied.

Several attempts on the life of Premier Lenin have been reported, the most recent reports coming through Copenhagen and Zurich on March 16 last. His chauffeur was said to have been injured when shots were fired at Lenin, but the latter was not touched.

A dispatch through German channels on Oct. 16, 1918, reported Lenin wounded in the shoulder by a bullet fired by a member of the Soviet Information Bureau. This report was never confirmed. In January, 1917, however, he had a narrow escape from assassination when his automobile was fired upon and its windows shattered by bullets. Lenin on this occasion, too, escaped harm, although a member of his party was wounded.

GARY SEES PERIL IF STEEL STRIKERS WIN

FAVORS SHANTUNG AWARD

Confident Japan Will Do Justice to China—Speaks at Baron Kondo's Dinner.

Supplementing his formal statement in reply to John Fitzpatrick, leader of the steel strikers, issued while he was a guest last night at a dinner tendered in the Ritz-Carlton by Baron Kondo, Japan's leading ship owner, Judge Elbert H. Gary declared that, should the steel strike succeed, "it might be the beginning of an upheaval which might bring on all of us grave and serious consequences."

The dinner, arranged in the interest of promoting fuller understanding of Japan's position with regard to Shantung, brought together the leading Japanese of this city and about sixty prominent men in banking and other key industries. Lewis L. Clarke, President of the American Exchange National Bank, was toastmaster, and when he introduced Judge Gary the Chairman of the Board of the steel corporation received great applause.

"My mind is somewhat perturbed," said Mr. Gary, "by an incident that has occurred during the dinner hour," and he then proceeded to read the information which had been conveyed to him concerning Mr. Fitzpatrick and also his reply to the labor leader's assertion. Then, laying down his notes, he again took up his remarks:

"And you, as part of the general public, must approve or condemn what I felt called upon to say just now," and from the audience there came a strong demonstration of approval.

Sees Danger of Upheaval.

"I can only say," continued Judge Gary, "that you, who know all the issues involved, know full well that if the strike succeeds it might and probably would be the beginning of an upheaval which might bring on all of us grave and serious consequences. You know that the questions involved in the strike, which is led by Foster, the acknowledged revolutionist, are higher than the United States Steel Corporation."

Judge Gary then indicated that his remarks on the steel situation had been only in the nature of an impromptu, and turned to discuss the relations between the United States and Japan, arising out of the award of Shantung to the Japanese.

"At the present time," he said, "for many reasons we are vitally interested in continued friendship between the United States and Japan. I shall not take time to discuss the merits of the League or of the peace terms which were placed before us, except to say that it is very easy to criticise nations and individuals, especially when we are not familiar with all the facts.

"The great majority of people are in favor of peace and opposed to war, and there is in favor of any compact which will insure this. Large numbers of people are convinced that President Wilson did all he could at the peace table. You will agree that the nations at the Peace Conference were actuated in some degree by selfishness. We, however, because of our position, could be less selfish and more generous, and we acted accordingly. But, as for the other nations, they were engaged in a good-natured contest for pecuniary advantage and other interests for the long future.

"But having said this much, and not basing it upon any information that I have, and we have not got, I want to say that Japan will some day, and suddenly, give positive proof to the world that she will live up to her traditions and do justice to China. I am certain that Japan will fulfill all of her international obligations and I think that it would be wise for the people of the United States to wait with their criticism."

Judge Gary leaving the topic of Japan then discussed conditions in the United States, saying:

"I hope that these statements regarding distribution of propaganda and the conversion of a large majority of the people to the doctrines of anarchy and Bolshevism have been greatly exaggerated. But there is such a propaganda and there are men, I am told, here preaching I. W. W. and other doctrines with money brought directly from Russia.

"Whether there is any great danger in this propaganda I do not not discuss. But if there is a danger of upheaval, a danger to property, and a danger to the life structure, it is better to open our eyes to it and protect ourselves against them."

Hepburn Stands by Japan.

A. Barton Hepburn, banker, who is an Honorary Vice President of the Japan Society, pointed out in his speech that there had been no objection raised when China gave rights in Shantung to Germany, but that there had been a great deal of criticism when the peace terms gave these same rights to the Japanese.

"I don't think that one just criticism," he declared, "can be leveled from any standpoint at the transfer of Germany's rights in Shantung to Japan."

Baron Kondo, after alluding to the fact that he had recently returned from the Peace Conference, where he had acted as an economic adviser to the Japanese peace delegates, declared that it was his conviction that the future relations of Japan and the United States could best be maintained through a freer exchange of views and by the promotion of increased trade between the countries.

"The Peace Treaty has already been ratified by Germany," he said, "and may I venture to say that it will in no distant date be ratified by all the signatory powers and that peace will thus be completely restored the world over. If the nations of the world will come to function well—and I for one have faith that it will—the peace of the world will then have attained a more lasting and solid basis than ever before.

"Just as the preservation of peace is ardently hoped for in Europe, so likewise do we pray for the reign of peace in the regions wherein we are bound by common interests and ties. I am referring to the vast expanse of the Pacific and its littorals. The best interests of the United States and Japan, the true welfare of both peoples, call loudly for the continuance of our relations on the best of terms.

GERMANS IN DISCORD OVER HEAVY TAXES

Erzberger Hints at Resignation of the Government if Opposition Is Pressed.

BIG CAPITAL LEVY ASSAILED

Clash In Committee Over Tax on Business Sales—American Help In Loan Wanted.

By GEORGE RENWICK.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 25.—Will the Government come to grief on the rocks of finance? Various committees of the National Assembly are now at work here preparing for the reopening of the parliamentary session on Tuesday and the deliberations of those who are dealing with financial matters certainly suggest breakers ahead, which Erzberger and the Ministry may find it difficult to ride.

There is an uneasy feeling in political circles that the National Assembly will not agree to the proposed great capital levy on the ground that the more Germany can produce in taxation the heavier will be the Allies' subsequent demands.

In one committee today there was something like a storm regarding the proposal for a tax on business sales, from which the Government expects much. In the business world it is looked upon as a scheme which will be very difficult to work. The consumer, too, will feel it heavily. For instance, on raw material there is a tax of 1 per cent. on each sale and there is 5 per cent on the finished article, so that in some instances the impost will be considerable.

The Majority Socialist representative on the committee proposed a postponement of consideration of this tax until the question of direct taxes that have been settled. The people, said the proposer of this resolution, could not bear the burden involved in such a tax.

A Democratic Party representative declared that his party would not agree to such a proposal, as, if insisted on, it might bring down the Government.

Hints at Cabinet Resignation.

Erzberger stuck to his tax. He said that he recognized the heavy load of taxation which the people had to bear, but the financial requirements of the country imperatively demanded big taxes. The Government's whole program of taxation was founded on the principle that direct and indirect taxes must be fixed and carried through at one and the same time. Erzberger hinted at the resignation of the Government should the matter be postponed.

The proposal for postponement was rejected, but the Socialists secured an adjournment of the committee in order to decide their attitude. It is noteworthy that opposition to the Government policy came from one of the two Government parties and that the members of the Centre (which is the other Government party) were decidedly cool toward Erzberger, who—and this also is interesting—had the support of the Democrats.

In another committee dealing with finance Erzberger imparted confidential information regarding plans for restoring the value of the mark. The best taxation would be useless, he declared, without the re-establishment of the customs barrier in the west and a big foreign loan. Such a loan could only be settled, he addded, by an international commission and with the help of the United States.

That a President can be an expensive dignitary was the discovery made by another committee. Herr Ebert has a salary of 120,000 marks. In addition to that, 200,000 marks are demanded for his general expenses. Then he must have free a furnished official residence and a bureau presided over by an under Secretary of State, consisting of three counsellors and countless underlings.

The magnitude of the expense of all this alarmed the committee and it was decided that the parties must be consulted and give their decisions before the matter could be brought before the National Assembly for consent.

Indeed, the situation is such that the Government recognizes the need for a reinforcement of strength. Overtures have even been made to the Independent Socialists, but these failed. Through the medium of Dr. Schiffer, former Finance Minister, negotiations are now going on with the Democrats. The latter knowing that their presence in the Government is becoming more imperative, are naturally putting forward stiff terms and are laying claim to some of the highest posts. Although the matter is definitely settled, it is looked upon as certain that such men as Bernstorff and Dernburg will return to important cabinet posts.

Ministerial Changes Rumored After Lloyd George Meets Cabinet—Viscount French to Stay.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—In addition to dealing with the railway crisis, Premier Lloyd George today called so many of the Cabinet Ministers into special conferences as to create much speculation. The belief was expressed in high political quarters that some important decisions were being made, probably involving Ministerial changes. Lately rumor has been busy concerning the possible resignation of Viscount French, Lord Lieutenant, and James Ian MacPherson, Chief Secretary for Ireland.

Viscount French has been in London for several days, consulting with Government officials, and was in a two-hour con

Some Stocks Rise, Steel Issues Recede Under Realizing Sales—Exchange Up.

The action of steel stocks and a number of other industrial issues yesterday indicated that considerable profit taking, resultant from purchases made when the steel strike first disturbed prices, was put through. This sort of dealings was a natural product of the professional character of recent markets. As far as the strike was concerned, the financial community read more clearly than on Wednesday the signs of a gradual disintegration of the strikers' forces and the impression that the situation was moving favorably to the employers was strengthened by the confidence breathed in local steel quarters. The charges made by Union Leader Fitzpatrick before the Senate Committee of Inquiry were considered ineffective as means for convincing the public and the legislators that hardships in the way of inadequate wages or working conditions were forced upon the men by the companies. The Street paid more attention, however, to news dispatches which told of the reopening of certain plants which had been closed, and of expanding operations in others which had been severely handicapped during the first three days of the strike.

The steel stocks were firm in the fore part of the session, but shortly developed a reactionary tone under fairly large offerings. Crucible Steel was an exception, gaining nearly 4 points, but it has long been recognized that special speculative factors were working in this stock. While the steel shares were moving off, the upbidding of tobacco, sugar, rubber and motor accessory stocks became a contrary feature and in this movement it appeared as though some of the trading influences which had been submerged for a time were again coming to the front. At the close marked irregularity existed throughout the list, price alterations for the day extending from gains of 8 points to declines of a point. A number of railroad issues were heavy. The copper stocks displayed strength in directions where heaviness had characterized dealings for several days, the result, evidently, of the declaration of several quarterly dividends at the rates of three months ago or better. Call money stiffened to 7 per cent. in the afternoon, although the majority of the day's loans were made or renewed at 6 per cent.

The continued firmness of the foreign exchange market came in for constructive comment. In banking quarters it was remarked that a stronger undertone than for some time past had been noted all this week for sterling, francs and marks, without any satisfying explanation appearing for the change. There was a feeling yesterday that sentiment was being shaped to a degree by the belief that the pending vote on ratification of the Peace Treaty might forecast an earlier adoption of the pact than had been expected. As has been frequently said many times before, the acceptance of the treaty is awaited as a sort of signal for the arrangement of foreign credits here for European borrowers, a measure looked upon as the only means for stabilizing exchange until trade processes bring their force to bear to correct an unbalanced position of rates. The recent buying of sterling and francs may also have been furthered by knowledge of the fact that the Treasury was permitting the European Governments which borrowed heavily here during the war period and later to add their interest into the principal of their debts, thus removing for the time being the necessity of remitting funds to this side. This was made public by Secretary of the Treasury Glass yesterday. Sterling rose 4¼ cents to the pound to 4.21½, as compared with last week's minimum quotation, for checks 9 cents lower. French rates were high, sight drafts at the close being quoted at 8.33, in contrast with 8.74 at last week's lowest level. The Belgian loan, expected to be the forerunner of others in the not distant future, is looked for within a few days.

BANKERS DISCUSS NEW BELGIAN LOAN

Conference at J. P. Morgan & Co. Offices to Settle Details of $50,000,000 Issue.

PUBLIC STATEMENT SOON

Bonds Will Run for at Least Twenty Years—Additional Firms in the Syndicate.

Plans for the flotation of the $50,000,000 Belgian loan in this market are being got into shape and it was said yesterday that the formal announcement might be expected within a week or ten days. By that time the King and Queen of the Belgians will probably be in this country and it is exepcted that the announcement will be timed for shortly after their arrival.

A conference of bankers was held at the offices of J. P. Morgan & Co., yesterday regarding the Belgian loan. The Morgan firm and the Guaranty Trust Company recently were appointed fiscal agents in this country for the Belgian Government and will be at the head of the American banking syndicate which will handle the operation of floating the bonds, which are exepcted to run for upward of twenty-five years. The bonds, bankers said yesterday, would be for a term of at least twenty years, and might possibly run for as long as thirty years. The rate of interest the securities will bear and the offering price to the public are matters still to be decided, and may not be determined upon for several days.

At yesterday's conference there were representatives of the so-called Belgian group, which includes J. P. Morgan & Co., the Guaranty Trust Company, the National City Company, Harris, Forbes & Co., Kidder, Peabody & Co., and Lee, Higginson & Co. The Belgian group, however, has been expanded for the purpose of arranging the present financing and at yesterday's meeting representatives of the Central Union Trust Company, the Liberty Securities Company and the Chase Securities Company were present.

It is believed that other institutions also will be included in the group by the time the official announcement is made. It was recalled yesterday that two of the companies which have already been added to the Belgian group, the Central Union Trust Company and the Chase Securities Company, were members of the former group which had under consideration the flotation of a $100,000,000 Belgian loan last July. That group was got together by Paine, Webber & Co., the New York and Boston stock brokerage firm, which secured the contract for the transaction. When that option expired, on July 20, the banking group continued its organization and until the official appointment of J. P. Morgan & Co., and the Guaranty Trust Company as Belgian fiscal agents was understood to be in negotiations with the Belgian Finance Minister.

$181,500 of the $234,000 Stolen in Chicago Now Recovered.

CHICAGO, Sept. 25.—With the recovery of $42,500, found buried on the Wisconsin farm of Onuery (John) Wejda, father of John S. Wejda, clerk in the Chicago Post Office, who is said to have planned the robbery, the amount recovered from the $234,000 stolen from a registered shipment from the Chicago Federal Reserve Bank to the Standard Oil Company of Indiana at Whiting, Ind., last Thursday, today was brought to $181,500. The money was found wrapped in old rags and buried in a milk can. It was the younger Wejda's share of the loot, according to officers.

The missing money is believed, the police say, to be in the possession of a man who disappeared with the arrest on Tuesday night of the younger Wejda and Leo and Walter Filipkowski. The Filipkowski brothers, with the missing man, are said to have done the actual robbing. Much of the money recovered was placed in safety deposit boxes by them or members of their family.

Canada Stops Postal Notes to Us.

Time clocks installed in the Surrogates' Court by order of Surrogates Fowler and Cohalan will go into commission today. Former Controller Prendergast tried to include the office with those of other city departments in which the clocks were installed, but the Surrogates resisted his efforts and in a suit which went to the Court of Appeals it was decided that the Controller had no authority in the case.

A Business Executor

THE problem of settling the estate of a person actively engaged in business, either alone, in partnership, or through control of a private corporation, is very different from that of an estate invested entirely in securities or real estate.

A business man should be assured that the executor is competent to step into his affairs and manage them until they may properly be liquidated.

The TRUST DEPARTMENT of this Company has been organized not only to manage the securities, real estate, and the routine affairs of executorships, but also with a special view to handling a going business, and the business problems which arise in the estates of men of large affairs.

SAGGING TENDENCY IN COTTON PRICES

FIRST MONTHLY REPORT OUT

Private Estimate Puts Crop Condition at 53.8 and Harvest at 10,220,000 Bales.

Some early selling of October contracts, induced chiefly by the circulation of notices, broke that option 20 points and the rest of the market corresponding amounts in the forenoon, and in the afternoon, thanks to an unfavorable map, some fairly good trade buying and the publication of the first of the important private crop reports, the market recovered all of this loss and sold up 5 to 9 points above the previous day's close. When our market closed, however, there was a sagging tendency which took prices down, with the exception of October, which finished at a net gain of 5 points, 3 to 9 points on the day. The range, therefore, was not more than 30 points in any option and was limited to 20 to 25 in the far distant months, which was the narrowest range of any day of the week.

The early selling of October was mostly done by commission houses which received notices either at the opening or shortly thereafter. The volume of these notices, however, was not so heavy, being not much in excess of 5,000 bales, and the selling they occasioned soon spent itself. After that the pressure against the market was only nominal and if there had been any sort of buying demand the market might easily have shot up rapidly. But the demand, too, was below normal.

J. W. Jay & Co. published their monthly crop report of condition and estimated harvest, making the former 53.8, against the Government's figure of 61.4 last month, and the estimated harvest 10,220,000 bales, as compared with the Government's August estimate of 11,230,000 bales. If the condition figure which this firm makes turns out to be the Government's report, the condition for the year's last report will be the lowest on record, displacing last year's low of 54.4, which was the lowest for Sept. 25 in the last twenty-five years.

In most parts of the trade the Jay estimate was regarded as rather too low, although the majority look for a considerable deterioration from last month's 61.4. But a falling off of 7.6 points in condition and a loss of more than 1,000,000 bales seems a little excessive, according to the information which has come to hand thus far. However, some big surprises have been experienced before this, and the prophets are a little uncertain of their positions.

CABLE FOR PACIFIC ORDERED

Commercial Co. Awaiting Arrangements with Japan.

Arrangements for laying the new American Pacific cable are going forward without a hitch, according to George Edward Ward, Vice President of the Commercial Cable Company, who arrived home from England yesterday on the Lapland. He said things would move rapidly as soon as the Japanese Government provided for the landing of the cable in Japan.

Mr. Ward went to England to contract for the 5,000-mile cable, which he said would cost $6,000 a mile. The cable is to be made in England because, he said, American manufacturers do not understand its construction. Clarence H. Mackay, President of the company, who went abroad recently, is in negotiation with the Japanese Government relative to landing the new line.

Commander Belliers, who has about completed a book on the battle of Jutland, also came on the Lapland. The Rev. John Rogers, of St. Patrick's Church, San Francisco, who spent the last three months in Ireland, said the Irish situation viewed from an American standpoint was deplorable. The cities, he said, were full of soldiers and the prisons full of sympathizers with the Irish cause.

Others on the Lapland included Miss Leslie O. Colby, a welfare worker, who won the Croix de Guerre for serving under fire in the Argonne; the Rev. Leighton Parks and his daughter, Miss Helen Parks, and Philip D. Curry, a Director in the International Mercantile Marine.

MEXICO DEBATES OIL LAW.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 24.—The possibility that the Mexican Senate would act quickly on oil legislation became uncertain today as a result of the session of the Upper House of Congress.

Senator Juan Frias, one of the authors of the bill being considered by the Senate, began the discussion for the measure, but Carlos Zetina offered a proposal for the amendment of Article 27 of the Constitution, an article which nationalizes oil lands. The measure, backed by Señor Frias and his faction in the Senate, makes Article 27 operative without being retroactive, thus meeting the principal objection of foreign interests.

The motion of Señor Zetina, it is believed, will entail weeks of discussion. While the Senate has taken up the oil question, the Chamber of Deputies has thus far failed to touch upon the oil proposals submitted by the executive branch of the Government last November, against provisions of which foreign oil interests have made strenuous objections.

GOVERNOR ACTS TO PROTECT INVESTORS

Move Prompted by Flood of New Oil Stocks Issued Several Months Ago.

ALBANY, Sept. 25.—Governor Smith has invited eleven financiers to serve on a committee which will investigate the subject of safeguarding the investing public in securities offered for sale. The committee will report to the Governor before the end of the year whether it believes new legislation should be enacted to prevent the offering for sale of securities of worthless or doubtful value.

The committee is composed of Albert H. Wiggin, Chairman of the Board of the Chase National Bank; Charles H. Sabin, President of the Guaranty Trust Company; William H. Porter of J. P. Morgan & Co.; William H. Remick of Remick, Hodges & Co.; Alfred J. Johnson of Anderson, Burns & Co.; John J. Pulleyn, President of the Immigrant Savings Bank; John Godfrey Saxe, George V. McLaughlin, Deputy Superintendent of Banks; Laurence D. McGuire, President of the New York City Real Estate Board; James D. Hoey, Second Vice President of the Continental Insurance Company, and Mortimer L. Schiff of Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

An intensified demand that greater safeguards be thrown around the issuing of new securities arose several months ago, when there was a flood of offerings in every section of the country. Many of these were identified with the oil boom in the mid-continent fields, and new oil stocks, many of them hardly more than prospects, made their appearance. Many bankers believed then that steps should be taken to halt the wholesale flooding of the country with securities of decidedly questionable value, which it was easy to dispose of to a public that as the Federal Reserve Board described it, was eager to indulge in speculation.

Until the first of this year, the Capital Issues Committee, which was brought into being by the war, exercised a sharp control of the issuing of new securities. Numerous petitions were made that such a committee have a permanent place, but action to this end was not taken.

Many States have "blue sky" laws, and recommendations along similar lines may be made to Governor Smith. For several years bills looking to this end have been introduced in the Legislature, but have been defeated.

"Foreign Trade through Foreign Investments"

The Remarkable Foreign Exchange Situation

We therefore again call attention to both the disadvantages and advantages to Americans resulting from present exchange rates.

Foreign exchange is down anywhere from 10% to over 50%. Unless some action is taken our export business cannot prosper and there will be a consequent curtailment of industrial activity in this country and the market for American securities in Europe will be adversely affected.

The situation can be improved only by:

(a) Shipping gold to this country—but no European nation is in a position to ship gold, and besides, we do not need gold.

(b) Shipping goods to this country—but home consumption absorbs practically the output of every European factory.

(c) Extension of long term dollar credits. This is purely a banking proposition and could be handled only by large bankers.

(d) The purchase of foreign securities is the most logical way of improving foreign exchange and at the same time help our Allies, who are our best customers. It will increase our exports, develop our industries and stabilize our markets. In addition, Americans will take advantage of a remarkable opportunity to invest. Should exchange return to normal there will be decided appreciation of the principal and interest involved.

We shall be glad to send the information we have compiled regarding foreign exchange, foreign trade, and investments in the internal loans of the strong European nations, which we consider are most attractive.

The Detroit Edison Company

5% First and Refunding Mortgage Gold Bonds

Dated July 1, 1915 — Interest March 1 and September 1 — Due July 1, 1940

A legal investment for Savings Banks in Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and Rhode Island

For further information regarding this issue attention is called to the letter of Mr. Alex Dow, President of the Company, copies of which will be furnished on request and which states that:

The Detroit Edison Company does the entire commercial electric lighting and industrial power business in the City of Detroit and of an extensive adjacent territory in the State of Michigan serving a total population estimated to exceed 1,100,000.

The First and Refunding Bonds are secured, in the opinion of counsel, by a direct first mortgage upon the new Connors Creek steam generating station in Detroit, having a present installed capacity of 105,000 k.w. and which, as planned, will have an ultimate capacity of 150,000 k.w. This station is situated on twenty-eight acres of land fronting on the Detroit River in the City of Detroit, and is favorably located as to transportation facilities both by rail and water. The site will accommodate a second power plant of at least equal generating capacity, when made necessary by the future growth of the business. The construction and equipment of the present plant conform with the highest standards of engineering practice. The bonds are secured in addition by a mortgage upon practically all of the remainder of the Company's property, subject to $14,000,000 underlying (closed mortgage) bonds.

On the basis of the valuation made by engineering experts of the Michigan Railroad Commission as of June 30, 1915, with the addition of net construction expenditures from that date to August 31, 1919, the value of the property of the Company on the latter date, excluding current assets and materials and supplies on hand, was more than twice the principal amount of all of the mortgage bonds then outstanding together with the present issue.

Earnings

Gross Earnings	$15,357,202.77
Operating Expenses, including Maintenance, Depreciation Reserve and Taxes	11,153,940.96
Net Earnings	$ 4,203,261.81
Annual Interest on Mortgage Bonds (including interest on present issue of $4,989,000 First and Refunding 5s)	1,533,250.00
Balance	$ 2,670,011.81

Net earnings almost exactly two and three-quarters times annual interest on mortgage bonds

On the basis of present market values, the junior securities represent an equity over and above the mortgage debt of more than $37,000,000.

The property of the Company in the City of Detroit is operated under franchises which are not limited in point of time, and which, in the opinion of counsel, extend in any event beyond the maturity of the bonds.

We recommend these bonds for investment

II.

The labor factor in the production of petroleum—a mining operation—is markedly lower than in any other mining practice. Coal and other solid minerals require extensive and costly labor—usually unionized—skilled to a very high degree. The simplicity of petroleum mining, the relatively few employees required, the ease and almost entire freedom from labor in the pipe line transportation of oil, all speak for the stability and uninterrupted continuity of the oil industry. Properly safeguarded oil companies, substantially capitalized, managed by operators of broad experience, and taking proper advantage of the "Law of Averages"—where the present large companies bring in close to ninety out of every hundred wells drilled—has placed such oil companies in the first rank of the world's safest investments.

"New Lamps for Old"

SLOCUM-AVRAM-SLOCUM MANAGEMENT

Look for products bearing this seal

WHEN the ancient sorcerer, disguised as a peddler, walked the streets of Bagdad crying "New Lamps for Old," he counted upon that desire inherent in the human race to discard old and worthless objects for new and better ones, to give him possession of Aladdin's lamp. That desire has been responsible for all there is of civilization's advancement.

Modern industry brilliantly reflects the advancement of the ages. Today, as never before, new fields of opportunity are opening for development in which capital will be asked to aid. The time, however, is one for caution, and before embarking on new enterprises capital should have assurance of the commercial worth and reliability of the products it will assist financially.

Years of successful experience in solving the problems of industry render S-A-S-LABORATORIES particularly qualified to co-operate. Whether your enterprise is a new or going concern, we can by investigation determine the mechanical, commercial and investment worth of your plant or product, manage its development, or manage the manufacture of your product in our own factory on any scale.

We will be pleased to place one of our engineers at your disposal for consultation.

DIVIDENDS.

GENERAL MOTORS CORPORATION.

The Board of Directors of General Motors Corporation has declared a dividend of $1.50 a share on the preferred stock, a dividend of $1.50 a share on the debenture stock and a dividend of $2.00 a share on the common stock of the corporation, payable on November 1, 1919, to stockholders of record at the close of business October 7, 1919.

M. L. PRENSKY, Treasurer.

TELEPHONE CO. TO RAISE $50,000,000

Corporation Arranging for Public Sale of Three-Year Six Per Cent. Notes.

TO FINANCE DEVELOPMENT

Proceeds Will Be Used for Carrying Out Expected Growth of Company's Facilities.

The American Telephone & Telegraph Company is arranging for the sale to the public of $50,000,000 three-year 6 per cent. notes, the proceeds to be used in financing the expected growth of the corporation's facilities. The transaction will be handled by J. P. Morgan & Co. This financing is more or less seasonal, as the extension of the Bell system requires the raising of new capital practically every year.

A statement issued by the corporation yesterday said that the property had been returned by the Government in as good physical condition as when it was taken under Federal control. The statement continued:

"It has been maintained according to the usual standards, the usual reserves for depreciation have been made, wages have been increased or are being adjusted to a scale suitable to present conditions. Charges for service have been generally advanced to cover increased costs.

"Under the terms of the act returning the properties to their respective owners, rates fixed by the Federal Government and in force on July 31, 1919, were given a legal status after the period of Federal control. Action already taken upon and consideration already given these rates by State Commissioners assures that nothing will be done which will jeopardize the earnings of the Company, which are now and have been sufficient for the past thirteen years to provide for the payment of all charges and a dividend of 8 per cent. on its capital stock."

BRITISH CUT FOOD PROFITS.

Local Control of Prices to be Started in the Midlands.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—Local control of the prices of certain commodities by limiting profits is provided for in a food order which comes into operation next Monday.

The order is to be applied first in the midlands, and the commodities affected are fish, fruit, and vegetables, on which the maximum gross profit permitted to retailers will be 33 per cent. This margin is intended to cover all loss from wastage.

HOTEL FOR LABOR ENVOYS.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—It was stated officially today that the international labor conference scheduled to meet here upon invitation of President Wilson on Oct. 29 would assemble on that day and that rumors that the conference might not be held or might be postponed because of the non-ratification of the Peace Treaty by the United States were unfounded. The conference will not be delayed on any account, it was said.

It became known today that final arrangements have been made for the entertainment of the delegates to the conference, one of the largest hotels in Washington having been engaged.

PROSPERITY

WE believe in the soundness and permanence of American institutions.

UNDER them, American energy and initiative have been free to develop vast resources into the largest national wealth in the world.

NOWHERE is there greater opportunity, nowhere greater reward for success. Nowhere have the wages of capital and the wages of labor been higher. Nowhere is the product of industry more broadly distributed.

Most hopeful of all—

No people is quicker to learn, nor more sure to detect basic untruths.

EUROPE has learned much and has much still to learn from this Republic. America can learn much from Europe, but nothing from the social or political extremists of Europe.

THERE seems to be current the thought that the world cannot go on in the future as it has in the past—that there must be a new world with new ideas.

WE reject this thought as applied to this country.

IN defense of our institutions we entered the War and did our part to obtain a correct answer to the issues raised.

We believe that we should resume, where we left off, the march and progress toward better things, and hold and defend our institutions against any and all attacks from without or from within.

FOR, by and large, America, in the vital tests of a vital hundred and forty years, has proved not only the wisdom of the framers of the Constitution, but the sound common sense and moderation of her people.

PERIODS of adjustment cause uneasiness, irritation and apprehension.

IN the past, they have always resulted in a healthful improvement in the welfare of all the people.

WE are firm in our confidence that now is no exception.

ASSAILS NAMING OF STONE & WEBSTER

ATTACKS HEDGES'S FIGURES

Quotes Prof. Bemis Against Plea for Increased Fares—Culver Line Soon to be Finished.

Corporation Counsel William P. Burr criticised yesterday the employment of Stone & Webster, who recently submitted to Federal Judge Mayer a report of the estimated losses which the city's transportation lines would be facing on Jan. 1, 1920, under five-cent fares. He said this firm was connected with sixty-two electric and water power and other public utility corporations in various parts of the country and that Frederick P. Royce, chosen by Lindley M. Garrison, receiver, under United States Judge Mayer, of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, to be the manager of the system, was a member of the Stone & Webster firm.

Mr. Burr also criticised a report recently made to the Public Service Commission by Job E. Hedges, receiver for the New York Railways Company, and contended that the mathematics in it were inaccurate.

The report of Stone & Webster was submitted to the Federal court early in September. It was in printed form and said that it was prepared by direction of Federal Judge Mayer and by order of Mr. Garrison, Mr. Hedges, and James R. Sheffield, receiver of the Interborough Consolidated Corporation, the holding company of the Interborough and New York Railways companies. The report is introduced by a statement, signed by, Judge Mayer, to the effect that Stone & Webster were acknowledged experts of high standing and that they had been employed by the Court to undertake an investigation of the financial condition of the properties affected by the receiverships.

In their report giving the estimated operating results of the companies for the year beginning Sept. 1, 1919, the estimated operating deficit of the New York Railways Company was fixed at $1,113,000, the Brooklyn surface lines, $1,288,000, the Interborough rapid transit lines, including interest on outstanding bonds and notes issued mainly to provide for the construction of lines under the dual system, about $9,880,000, and the elevated and subway lines of the B. R. T. system, after paying interest on receiver's certificates, about $2,798,000.

Concerning this report Mr. Burr said:

"It seems to me that in view of the fact that Stone & Webster, the concern employed by the receivers under direction of the Federal Court to investigate and report on the financial conditions and property valuations of the railways now operated by the receivers, are found to be identified with numerous public utility corporations, it would be advisable, to say the least, to secure the services of some engineers or accountants who are not closely tied up to and identified with public utility corporations. The necessity for this is evidenced by a communication which we have today received from Professor Edward W. Bemis, the expert employed by the city in the traction litigation."

Mr. Burr then refers to the report of the operation of the New York Railways Company by Receiver Hedges and quotes as follows from the communication of Prof. Bemis:

"'The New York Railways Company has just submitted its report to the Public Service Commission for June and for the twelve months ended with June 30, 1919. Some remarkable, and I fear, misleading conclusions are drawn by the receiver in the submission of his report. On the face of the returns, the New York Railways had a profit during the year or over $700,000 after paying up all operating expenses, including maintenance and taxes. The receiver changes this into his report into a deficit of over $800,000 and does this chiefly by an arbitrary allowance of $1,386,000 for depreciation reserve.

"'The excuse seems to be that, owing to the increase in the prices of labor and materials, it costs more to make the same repairs and renewals in the year ended June 30, 1919, than during the previous year. As a matter of fact, however, the price of labor and materials used in repairs and renewals was little if anything higher during 1918-1919 than during 1917-1918. It is furthermore a remarkable fact that the actual expenditure by the receiver for repairs and renewals has been less since he took charge, March 20, 1919, up to the latest returns June 30, 1919, than during the corresponding three months and ten days of 1918.

"'By such curious use of figures the appearance of large deficits on the four crosstown storage battery lines (now abandoned) has been created by Stone & Webster. For example, in May, 1919, the total operating expenses and taxes of the New York Railways, as reported to the Public Service Commission, were $959,757, or about 40 cents per car mile. The receiver appears not only to have arbitrarily assumed that the expense on the account of the theoretical charges should be over 60 cents, but he seems to have assumed that the same high cost per car mile applies to the storage battery lines, as he contends, should apply to the system as a whole, yet the storage battery lines have no expensive underground conduits. The cars are much lighter than those in use on the rest of the system.

"'Frederick P. Royce, one of the Stone & Webster officials,' Mr. Burr also said, 'was recently employed by Receiver Lindley M. Garrison to take over the management of the B. R. T. system.'"

Transit Construction Commissioner John H. Delaney announced yesterday that he had overcome obstacles which had prevented the completion of the Culver line to Coney Island, and that the line would be completed in time to inaugurate a general 5-cent fare to Coney Island about Jan. 1. One of the obstacles has been the difficulty in obtaining right of way from Sheepshead Bay Road to the Coney Island terminal.

Orders were issued yesterday to the New York Municipal Railway Corporation to go ahead with the work.

Mayor Hylan, having failed to reply to the letter of Public Service Commissioner Lewis Nixon asking for information as to the method of operating the buses on the lower east side, Mr. Nixon sent to the Mayor yesterday a follow-up note which said:

"This commission has no official information that the permission granted to Louis Riedl to operate the lines of buses on the routes of the suspended storage battery cars has been availed of. In co-operation with the City Government this commission granted a certificate of convenience and necessity upon a certified copy of the permit granted to Mr. Riedl.

"It should be possible to give this commission the information to which it is entitled, that it may perform the duties required by law. I again request such information as has already been asked for."

Mr. Riedl having failed to supply buses under his permit, Grover Whalen, Commissioner of Plant and Structures, got more than sixty jitneys which are now operating without a permit from the Public Service Commission. Asked about this, Mr. Whalen said the commission would get all the information possible as soon as the Board of Estimate decided upon some form of permanent operation.

The Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company made arrangements yesterday to put men in the places of women employes under the law forbidding the employment of women during certain night hours. In answer to advertisements for 200 men the employment bureau of the company at 40 State Street was crowded with applicants, among them many men formerly in the army and navy.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday 9,136 packages. Demand still exceeds the supply of fine and fancy fresh creamery, and prices in consequence are very strong, with most sales ½@1c higher. Medium qualities are improving a little, but there is still a large accumulation of these, and the range of values is unusually wide. Ladles and packing stock quiet and steady. EGGS.—12,329 cases. Trade is very quiet in the general market, owing to the close Jewish holiday. The supply of high grade fresh gathered eggs is still very light, however, and there are demands for such sufficient to absorb the limited offerings at ruling prices, the full range of values shows little change, but some marks of high firsts, and all qualities recently selling at top extra first quotation have been placed even a little above our recent quotations. Under grades slow at the moment. Storage eggs have had more inquiry, and samples are being examined of desirable stock at prices a little above previous quotations. Some sales have been effected at the advance quoted. Nearby white eggs are very quiet at the moment, but high qualities are scarce, and the general tone of the market firm for such. Fresh gathered extras, a dozen, 59@60c; extra firsts, 56@58c; firsts, 52@55c; seconds, 45@51c; under grades, 37@44c; dirties, No. 1, 40@42c; No. 2 and poorer, 32@39c; checks, good to choice, dry, 36@38c; under grades, 28@35c; refrigerator, special marks, fancy, charges paid, 49@50c; firsts, 47@48c; seconds, 44@46c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby Western, hennery whites, fine to fancy, 78@80c; fair to prime, 65@77c; gathered whites, common to prime, 62@77c; Pacific Coast, whites, express, fancy, 80c; other Western and Southern, gathered whites, 58@73c; State, Pennsylvania and nearby, hennery browns, fancy, 66@70c; gathered brown and mixed colors, graded, fancy, 59@60c; fair to prime, 50@58c.

COLLATERAL TRUST SIX PER CENT. GOLD BONDS, SERIES A.

To the Holders of Third Extended Installment Receipts:

Notice is hereby given to holders of Third Extended Installment Receipts that the final installment on account of the purchase of this Company's Collateral Trust Gold Bonds Series A will be due and payable in cash or in New York funds to the order of Chile Copper Company at the office of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, 140 Broadway, New York City, on or before September 29, 1919.

In accordance with the terms of said receipts, upon the surrender of any said receipt at the office of said Guaranty Trust Company on or before September 29, 1919, and upon payment of the final installment due thereon and upon an adjustment of accrued interest as hereinafter provided, there will be delivered to said receipt holder a bond or bonds in the principal sum called for by said receipt or receipts with coupons attached either (a) for April 1, 1920, and thereafter, or (b) for October 1, 1919, and thereafter, at the option of the receipt holder.

(a) In case said receipt holder requests a bond or bonds with coupons attached for April 1, 1920, and thereafter, he will, if a receipt holder in respect of the purchase of One Thousand Dollars ($1,000), principal amount of said bonds, adjust the accrued interest by receiving from Chile Copper Company, at the office of Guaranty Trust Company, Ten Dollars ($10.00), being the interest upon his initial installment from May 29, 1919, to September 29, 1919, and by receiving from Chile Copper Company at the office of Guaranty Trust Company a further sum of Thirty-three cents ($0.33), being the interest upon the initial and final installment for September 29, 1919, and September 30, 1919. Adjustment will be made in the case of a receipt holder in respect of a purchase of the principal amount of said bonds other than One Thousand Dollars ($1,000) proportionately.

(b) In case said receipt holder requests a bond or bonds with coupons attached for October 1, 1919, and thereafter, he will, if a receipt holder in respect of the purchase of One Thousand Dollars ($1,000), principal amount of said bonds, adjust the accrued interest by receiving from Chile Copper Company, at the office of Guaranty Trust Company, Ten Dollars ($10.00), being the interest upon his initial installment from May 29, 1919, to September 29, 1919, and by paying to Chile Copper Company at the office of Guaranty Trust Company, Twenty-nine Dollars and Sixty-seven cents ($29.67), being the interest from April 1, 1919, to September 29, 1919, upon the bond delivered to him. Adjustment will be made in the case of receipt holders in respect of the purchase of a principal amount of said bonds in a sum other than One Thousand Dollars ($1,000) proportionately.

In accepting either option a receipt holder, to receive the interest due September 29, 1919, must present to the Guaranty Trust Company "Ownership Certificates" as required by the Income Tax Law. If option (b) is adopted, the receipt holder will be obliged to file an additional "Ownership Certificate" upon presenting for payment the coupon due October 1, 1919. This Company, therefore, suggests that receipt holders will avoid unnecessary complication by the adoption of option (a) above set forth.

The receipt by Guaranty Trust Company of such "Ownership Certificate" made out in the proper amount and form and signed by the receipt holder will constitute an agreement between said receipt holder and the Company that the method of option (a) of adjusting said accrued interest may be adopted.

As provided in said Third Installment Receipts, upon default by the holder of any such receipt in the payment of the remaining installment of the purchase price of said bonds, the Company shall be entitled to dispose of said bonds for its own account at public or private sale without notice to said holder.

COLUMBIA ENROLLS 10,000.

Including Summer School, University Will Be Largest in World.

The registration of students for Columbia University's 168th year has reached 10,000, it was announced yesterday. The enrollment, which is complete except for the graduate faculty, is the largest in the history of the university. Including the Summer School it is estimated that more than 20,000 students will attend Columbia this year, making Columbia the largest university in the world.

Plans have been made to offer new courses in labor problems and industrial conditions this year. Professor John J. Coss, an authority on industrial and personnel management, will give a course in strikes, lockouts, and the present labor unrest. A course in the principles and practice of factory management will be given by Professor W. Rautenstrauch, and B. M. Squires, Commissioner of Conciliation in the Department of Labor, will give a course in industrial relations. A course in the psychology of industry, dealing with the physchology of the selection and treatment of employers, will be given by Professor H. L. Hollingsworth of the Department of Psychology.

The registration in the various departments of the university, complete with the exception of the graduate faculty, numbers 1,383 in Columbia College; 441 in the School of Law; 381 in the School of Medicine; 136 in the School of Engineering; 45 in the School of Architecture; 90 in the School of Journalism; 591 in the Graduate Faculty; 3,701 in the Department of Extension Teaching; 186 in the School of Business; 3 in the School of Dentistry; 664 in Barnard College; 2,231 in Teachers College, and 44 unclassified university students.

Announcement was made yesterday of the list of ministers who will preach during the year in St. Paul's Chapel, Amsterdam Avenue and 117th Street. Among them will be Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes of Yale University; Rev. Herbert Shipman, Rector of the Church of the Heavenly Rest; Rev. Henry van Dyke of Princeton University; Rev. William Arnold Shanklin, President of Wesleyan University; Rev. W. J. Dawson, Pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, and the Rev. Malcolm James MacLeod of the Collegiate Church of St. Nicholas.

CATTELL FILES MORE SUITS.

Ex-Columbia Professor Names Alumni News Publishers and Trustees.

Professor J. McKeen Cattell, formerly Professor of Psychology at Columbia, who filed an action on Monday for damages against President Nicholas Murray Butler of the university and the members of the Special Committee, consisting of George L. Ingraham, John B. Pine, Francis S. Bangs and Stephen Baker, who recommended that he be dismissed for writing letters to Congressmen in opposition to the Government war program in 1917, filed two additional suits yesterday in the Supreme Court.

One suit names as defendants the Alumni Federation of Columbia, which publishes The Alumni News, and Leverling Tyson, Secretary of the organization, who is editor of The Alumni News, for alleged damaging statements concerning the removal of Professor Cattell. The other suit names the trustees as defendants, and is understood to be a demand for his reinstatement. Alfred Hayes, attorney for Professor Cattell in the litigation, refused to discuss the suits.

CITIES CAN STILL BUY ARMY FOOD

But Department Will Sell Certain Articles in Own Stores.

ENDS PARCEL POST SALES

Refrigerated Evaporated Fruits and Frozen Meat and Poultry Will Be Sold to Municipalities.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—Officials in the Quartermaster Department of the army said today that the report that no more army food would be sold in the great cities was a mistake. The order that no more surplus food would be sold direct to municipalities was merely because the army intended to open its own stores and sell direct to the consumer. Such stores were scheduled to be opened today. Frozen meats, poultry, and evaporated fruits would still be sold direct to municipalities, it was said.

A circular issued within the last two days explains the situation thus:

"The Quartermaster General of the army will suspend at close of business on Sept. 24 all sales of foodstuffs through the parcels post service and will redistribute the unsold portion of the surplus stocks of subsistence held by the War Department to the twenty-four retail stores which the War Department will open throughout the United States on Sept. 25.

"The War Department will fill all orders for foodstuffs which have been or shall be filed with Postmasters prior to the suspension of the parcels post sales. The offering for sale of subsistence to municipalities, except evaporated fruits and frozen meats and poultry, will also be suspended at the close of business on Sept. 24.

"The War Department will continue to sell to municipalities and municipal selling agencies the frozen meats and poultry and evaporated fruits which it holds in refrigeration at the fixed prices recently announced and under the conditions which it has prescribed for such sales.

"The prices fixed on the food commodities will be the prices at which those commodities will be delivered at any point in the retail district within which the purchaser lives. The counter price and the delivery price are the same.

TRAMPLED AT ARMY SALE.

2,000 in Scramble When First Government Store Opens.

A crowd numbering more than 2,000 men, women, and children gathered yesterday at 22 West Nineteenth Street, where the first Government retail sales station opened for business. Notwithstanding the fact that the actual distribution of goods did not start until 1 o'clock in the afternoon, the crowd began to assemble early in the morning, so that by 9 o'clock some 500 persons were in line.

Just before noon a special detail of police arrived to handle the would-be purchasers, and the patrolmen at once formed a line, where newcomers took their positions in the order of arrival. The utmost efforts of the police, however, were unable to prevent disorder when the doors of the sales station opened. Each one present apparently made up his or her mind to be the first buyer, and there was a concerted rush at the building. Men and women trampled each other in the excitement.

One woman fainted just as she got to the door, and when she was revived she explained that she had been waiting in line since morning and had had no lunch. Mischievous boys from the upper stories of nearby buildings added to the troubles of the police by throwing water and paper wads soaked in water upon the bargain seekers.

Inside Captain Jaffrey Peterson of the Quartermaster Corps, the officer in charge, tried to quiet things by explaining that later there would be a great variety of articles to choose from, so that no one need rush. Captain Peterson said that this store would be open for at least three months.

When the closing time came several hundred disappointed persons were still outside waiting for standing room before the counters. The sales station had blankets and woolen goods, including underwear and socks, for sale. Later it will be stocked with every known article in use by the army, including steel trench helmets and worn gas masks.

Commissioner of Markets Jonathan C. Day announced yesterday that there was plenty of surplus army food in the schoolhouses to keep the sales going for at least two weeks longer.

The Commissioner made public a letter from John H. Meyer, editor and manager of The Retail Grocers' Advocate. The letter asked the Commissioner if he considered it fair to go into competition against the dealers, who had overhead expenses. Also Mr. Meyer inquired whether it was fair to spend the city's money in such an enterprise.

Replying to this query, Dr. Day pointed out that the city had not invested any money in the rolling stores, but had simply granted the companies behind the proposition permission to operate on the city's streets. He declared that he was willing to co-operate with any movement that might result in cutting down the cost to the people, and that he regarded the rolling stores as being a means to this end.

Federal Food Administrator Arthur Williams said that from his experience in New York City he considered that United States Attorney General Palmer was entirely right in his assertion that the prices of foodstuffs had been reduced 15 per cent. in the country in the last two months.

URGE TRADE WITH GERMANY

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—In a White Paper issued tonight by the Board of Trade on conditions of trading with Germany and other countries it is stated:

"During the war it was necessary to prohibit all trading with the enemy, but with the conclusion of peace with Germany the necessity for this prohibition ceased. It may be expected that there will be considerable demand in the late enemy countries for all kinds of goods. As this market is now open to all the world, it is no part of the policy of his Majesty's Government to discourage British traders from competing therein, and it is desirable that British traders should make every effort to secure a proper footing in Central Europe."

Any goods, it is added, may now be exported to Germany without license, except certain goods on the lists of prohibited exports, which will require license. Goods may be imported from Germany and paid for without license except goods the importation of which from all foreign countries is prohibited.

Other transactions of a commercial or financial nature with firms in Germany are permissible without further license provided that they do not involve the payment of money arising out of prewar transactions, the delivery of or dealing in property held in this country for persons in Germany since before the outbreak of the war, the transfer of securities by or on behalf of any person in Germany, the allotment or transfer of securities issued by a company to or for the benefit of a German subject, or the transfer of any debt or other obligation due to a person in Germany.
